BOSTON.

IN the year 1630, Gov. John Winthrop and his party, called the Massachusetts Company, arrived in several small vessels and settled in Salem and Charlestown; but not liking the location, part of his company came to the peninsula called by the Indians, Shawmut, "The Place Where Boats Go," and by the English, "Trimountain," from the three prominent hills on the peninsula. On the 7th of September (old style) at the court held at Charlestown Trimountain was ordered to be called Boston, in honor of Rev. John Cotton who came from the old town of Boston in Lincolnshire, England. The original limits of Boston, which were really surrounded by water (the harbor on one side and the Charles River on the other) comprised about seven hundred acres of land. The tide ran up to where Dock Square now is and Charles River made a good sized bay (afterwards known as "Back Bay") also another bay at a few rods northwest of Hanover Street, leaving a narrow neck of land connecting the North End with the rest of the peninsula. The dwellings of the settlers were situated on Washington Street between State and Eliot Streets; Elm Street; upper part of Hanover Street, and north side of Sudbury Street. The settlers were in constant fear of the Indians who lived in the wilderness around the town. On the first day of September, 1634, a Town Government was organized for Boston, and from about this time to the year 1700 many harsh and cruel acts were done by the town authorities and a majority of the inhabitants. Persons were whipped, put in the stocks and banished for trivial offences; many were hung for witchcraft and for being Quakers; and in 1659 two men were hung on Boston Common for being heretics. In 1686, Sir Edmund Andros was appointed by the King, Governor of the colony, and took away the charter; but in 1692 Gov. Phipps was appointed by the King, and arrived in Boston with a new charter. In 1703 the first newspaper was published in America by John Campbell, the postmaster of the town. In 1711 The Old Town House, which was one of the first buildings erected, the first meeting house, and about one hundred other buildings were destroyed by fire. In 1722 Boston had a population of 10,670 and in 1742 had increased to 16,382.

In 1770 began the troubles which ended with the American Revolution. On March 5 the British troops fired on the citizens in King (now State) Street, in which three were killed, two mortally wounded and others severely wounded. The whole British force were afterwards compelled to leave the town. Dec. 16, 1773, a party (afterwards known as the Boston Tea Party) disguised as Indians went from the Old South Church to three vessels lying at Griffins (now Liverpool) wharf and emptied three hundred and forty-two chests of tea into the sea. June 1, 1774, by order of the British Government, the port of Boston was closed, and Salem near Boston, was made the port of customs, and a large force of British soldiers were again quartered in various parts of Boston. June 17, 1775, was fought the Battle of Bunker Hill, and Boston was filled with the wounded British soldiers. Gen. Howe was now in command of the British forces in Boston, and the Old South Church was used as a riding school for his cavalry. March 4, 1776, Gen. Washington in command of the Continental Army, besieged Gen. Howe's army in Boston, and erected forts on the different heights commanding the town, and on March 17 Gen. Howe was compelled to evacuate the town and take refuge on his ships in the harbor, and with war vessels and transports sailed to Halifax, N. S., and Gen. Putnam, in the name of the Thirteen United States of America, took possession of Boston. On the 4th of July, 1776, the Declaration of Independence was passed by Congress and the news was received in Boston with great rejoicing; all signs of British rule were immediately removed and destroyed. Oct. 25, 1780, John Hancock of Boston, was chosen Governor.

In 1789 Gen. Washington entered Boston over the "Neck" and passed through Washington Street, which had been named for him, to his quarters. In 1800 the population had increased to 24,937. In 1814 several thousand United States troops were quartered in Boston at the forts in the harbor, for defence against the British forces. In February, 1822, the Legislature passed an act establishing the City of Boston, subject to the acceptance or refusal by a vote of the citizens. On March 4, 1822, the vote was taken in Faneuil Hall and the act was accepted by a vote of 2,797 yeas, 1,881 being nays, and Boston became a city May 1, with Hon. John Phillips as Mayor, and the City Council consisted of eight aldermen and forty-eight councilmen. In 1825 Boston contained 58,281 inhabitants. On Sunday, June 11, 1837, occurred the great Broad Street riot, between fire companies and Irishmen, in which at least fifteen thousand persons participated, and a large force of militia was called out to suppress the riot. May 16, 1846, war was declared between the United States and Mexico. July 22, 1848, the Massachusetts regiment, Col. Isaac H. Wright, returned from the Mexican war and met with a grand reception. October 25, 1848, was celebrated the introduction of Cochituate water into Boston. In 1856 Boston had a population of 138,788. In 1861 commenced the great rebellion, and at the capture of Fort

Sumpter by the rebel forces, President Lincoln issued his proclamation and called for volunteers from all the states to suppress the rebellion, when Boston took a very active part, sending to the war her full quota of men for the army and navy. On the 14th of July, 1863, at about 1 o'clock, commenced the great draft riot in Boston. A large mob took possession of the "North End" and defied the city and United States authorities. The City Government immediately prepared for the conflict; the whole police force were armed, the regulars, marines, and the whole state militia were called out and marched at once to the North End. The mob attacked the Cooper Street Armory, where the Light Artillery and a battalion of regulars were quartered. On the discharge of the cannon and the muskets of the regulars, fully fifty persons were killed or wounded in the mob. The city sent 26,175 men to the war for the Union. November 9-10, 1872, a fire destroyed $75,000,000 worth of property.

In 1637 the first addition of outlying territory that was made to Boston was Noddle's Island, "layd to Boston," and its name changed to East Boston. It remained unimproved and almost uninhabited until 1833, when it was purchased by a company of capitalists and improvements commenced. South Boston, under the name of Dorchester Village, annexed to Boston, March 6, 1804; Washington Village, formerly part of Dorchester, annexed May 21, 1855; Roxbury annexed January 6, 1868; Dorchester, January 3, 1870; Charlestown, West Roxbury and Brighton, January 5, 1874; Back Bay annexed April 25, 1859; Suffolk County incorporated May 10, 1643.

The present area of Boston, with all its districts, is 23,661 acres. To the original 783 acres of the peninsula have been added East Boston, 836 acres; South Boston, 1,002 acres; Roxbury, 2,700 acres; Dorchester, 5,614 acres; West Roxbury, 7,848 acres; Charlestown, 586 acres; Brighton, 2,277 acres; Breed's Island, 785 acres; Deer Island, 184 acres.

The city contained a population of 362,839 in 1880, 448,477 in 1890, and in 1899 has more than 500,000.

Geo. H. Walker & Co., Boston. OLD STATE HOUSE.

OLD BOSTON.

Places of Historic Interest.

The Old State House, at the head of State Street, is one of the most interesting relics of the provincial period of the city. There was situated the colonial market house, and from 1657 to 1711 a Town House, built of wood, and the Provincial Capitol, erected from funds bequeathed by Capt. Robert Keayne, the first commander of the "Artillery Company." The Town House was burned in 1711, and in 1713 the present building was erected. In 1747 a considerable part of the interior of the building was burnt. Here Endicott, Leverett, Bradstreet, Sir Edmund Andros, Sir William Phips, Lord Bellomont, Dudley, Burnet, Shirley, Pownall, Bernard and others presided over the proceedings for the government of the colony and province, by royal consent. Here John Adams, James Otis, Quincy, Warren, Cushing, Hancock and numerous patriots made the first opposition to the royal authority. In 1768 a British regiment was quartered in the building, and in 1770 "The Boston Massacre" took place in front of the building. The British soldiers who fired upon the people were tried in the building. Here also Generals Gage, Howe and Clinton held their councils of war. From the balcony Washington reviewed the entry of the American army after the termination of the siege of Boston. On July 18, 1776, the Declaration of Independence was read from the east window, and the proclamation of peace in 1783. Here the State constitution was planned, and Hancock, the first Governor elected by the people, was inaugurated. The Count D'Estaing and the officers of the French allied fleet were received. In 1789 Washington reviewed a great procession from the west end of the building. The State Legislature met here until 1798, when the whole State government marched to the new State Capitol on Beacon Hill. In 1835 William Lloyd Garrison escaped from the mob by entering the building on one side and through to a carriage on the other side of the street. The first public library in America was located on this site, and the first Episcopal services in Boston were held here in 1686. From 1820 to 1830, the Grand Lodge of Masons of Massachusetts occupied the building and here Lafayette was entertained by the fraternity. From 1830 to 1839 the city government of Boston occupied this building as a city hall. After that time the building was leased for offices for general business until 1881, when the ancient building was thoroughly repaired and placed as near as possible in the original order as when occupied in provincial times, and given in charge of the Bostonian Society, who have filled the building with rare paintings, prints and relics of old Boston in the colonial and provincial periods.

CUSTOM HOUSE.

State Street previous to the revolution, was King Street. In 1702 was proclaimed, in this street, the accession of Anne to be Queen of England. Opposite 23 State Street is the spot, marked by a circle in the pavement, where the citizens were killed and wounded by Captain Preston's soldiers, March 5, 1770. Down this street to the wharf, escorted by the U. S. Marshal and his thousand deputies, U. S. marines, regulars, and the entire state militia, one black man, in chains, was sent back to slavery. But in 1861-65 the Massachusetts Volunteers marched up State Street on the way to the South, to help free the blackman.

28 State Street is the site of the Provincial Custom House, Royal Exchange Tavern and U. S. Bank.

27 State Street is the site of the first church in Boston, built in 1632 of logs, with thatched roof.

At the Southeast Corner of State and Washington Streets, Henry Knox, afterwards General and Secretary of War, was a bookseller's apprentice.

The Town Pump stood at the northeast corner of Washington and State Streets. On the northwest corner was the first store for the sale of merchandise in Boston, kept by John Coggan.

Captain Robert Keayne, the first commander of the Artillery Company known as the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, lived on the southeast corner of State and Washington Streets.

Custom House on State and India Streets is a massive granite building erected in 1837-47 at a cost of $1,000,000. The roof and dome are of granite.

The British Coffee House, site of 66 State Street, headquarters of the Tories and army and navy officers. In this house, James Otis, the patriot, was brutally attacked by one of the crown officers and so severely injured about the head that he never recovered from the effects of the blows, and after a long troublesome sickness was at Andover, Mass., when standing in the doorway of the house he was struck by lightning and instantly killed. His remains were brought to Boston and buried in the Granary Burying Ground.

The Bunch of Grapes Tavern, Kilby Street, corner of State Street, 1713, was a famous headquarters for the patriots; here assembled the "Sons of Liberty," Washington and staff were entertained here in 1776, Lafayette was also here, and the Society of the Cincinnati used to have their entertainments in the old tavern.

Northeast Corner of Liberty Square and Kilby Street was the scene of the Stamp Act riots; Oliver's effects thrown into the street.

The Roebuck Tavern stood on the site of 45 Merchants Row; built in 1650 by Richard Whittington.

The Crown Coffee House in 1710 stood on Chatham Row.

Quaker Burying Ground was on Congress, opposite Lindall Street, established in 1709. The remains were taken up and removed to the Quaker burying ground at Lynn in 1826.

Post Office, Devonshire Street, between Water and Milk Streets. The corner stone of this beautiful granite building was laid Oct. 16, 1871. Besides the post office department, the United States sub treasury and the United States Court occupy the building.

Faneuil Hall, Faneuil Hall Square, built in 1742 by Peter Faneuil, the wealthy Huguenot, and presented to Boston for a market and town hall. The architect was Smibert, the portrait painter. It was damaged by fire in 1761, but was rebuilt—partly by lottery funds. James Otis, the patriot, delivered the oration at the re-dedication. The vane on the cupola is a gilded grasshopper with glass eyes. Made in 1742. The building was enlarged in 1806 by the architect Bulfinch. The main hall has many portraits of prominent men. There in "The Cradle of Liberty" was denounced the British administration of the colonies. In 1768 the 14th Royal Regiment was quartered in the building, and in 1775-76 the British officers established a theatre. Receptions and banquets were given here to Washington, Count D'Estaing, Lafayette, Jerome Bonaparte, Prince de Joinville, King Louis Phillipe, Talleyrand, Lord Ashburton, Lord Elgin, Kossuth, Andrew Jackson, George B. McClellan; the lying in state of Anson Burlingame and Col. Fletcher Webster. A long line of illustrious orators have addressed the people from the rostrum—Otis, Channing, Webster, Jefferson Davis, Sumner, Garrison, Everett, Phillips, Evarts, Hillard, Beecher, N. P. Banks, Long, Reed and a host of other eminent men. The old building has undergone a thorough overhauling, and all of the interior woodwork has been removed from the floors, galleries, stairways, columns, and these including the roof and belfrey will be replaced by fire-proof material. But little now remains of the original interior construction of the building, and of the exterior only the bare brick walls.

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, chartered as the "Artillery Company" in 1638, the oldest military corps in the United States, has had its armory for many years in the upper hall of Faneuil Hall. Among its commanders have been Sir Charles Hobly, Sir John Leverett, Winthrop, Winslow, Heath, Dearborn, Banks, Martin and Cowdin.

Quincy Market, built 1825-26, is a two story, granite building, 535 feet long and covers 27,000 square feet of land. In the centre of the building is a large dome, and at each end are large porticos with massive granite pillars. The first floor and basement are devoted to the sale of meat, vegetables, fish, butter and cheese.

Gov. John Leverett's house was where Sears Building now stands.

In 1640 a large meeting house was erected on the site now occupied by the Rogers Building, 209 Washington Street.

Sir Edmund Andros lived on the site numbered 216 Washington Street.

Geo. H. Walker & Co., Boston.

OLD SOUTH MEETING-HOUSE.

The Old Province House walls are now standing in the rear of the buildings opposite the Transcript office.

Old South Meeting House, corner of Washington and Milk Streets. On the site of this church, which was part of the garden of Gov. Winthrop, the Third Congregational Society built a small building of cedar for a church. In 1730 the present brick building was erected. Whitefield the celebrated divine often preached in this church. Otis, Warren, Hancock and other patriots addressed the citizens from its pulpit in 1768, 1770, 1773, and here Warren, in March, 1775, delivered the oration on the Boston Massacre. In 1775 the pews were removed and the church was used for a riding school for the British dragoons. In 1872 to 1875 the building was used as the post office. A committee of twenty-five women raised and paid $430,000, for the building and site to preserve it to posterity. The building has now a new roof; the old one found to be weak in many places was removed. The church is now used as a museum by the association, and a rare collection of relics relating to the history of early New England is displayed, and admission to the church and collection is secured for twenty-five cents.

John Winthrop's House was near the site of present 286 Washington Street. His house was torn down for fuel by the British garrison in 1775.

The Spring in Spring Lane from Washington Street was the earliest spring mentioned by the first settlers, and was used by the townspeople for many generations.

Franklin's Birthplace was on the site of 19 Milk Street. The small, frame house was standing in the early part of this century.

Gen. Howe's headquarters was on the corner of Milk and Oliver Streets.

John Howard Payne lived on the corner of Chauncy and Federal Streets.

Ralph Waldo Emerson was born on southeast corner of Summer and Chauncy Streets.

Samuel Adams was born on Purchase Street, near Summer Street.

Franklin Street, formerly Vincent's Lane, renamed in 1846, was named for Franklin, and a narrow park formerly occupied the centre of the street, the roadway being on both sides. In the centre of this ground, at its widest part, stood a large stone urn on a heavy base and pedestal, on which was inscribed a eulogy to Franklin. On both sides of the street were handsome mansions. In the centre of the block on the south side of the street was located the Boston Library, and at one time the Massachusetts Historical Society had rooms there. Under the building was a large arch over the roadway of Arch Street. On the eastern end of the same side of the street stood the Holy Cross Cathedral. Federal Street Theatre was on the north corner of Federal and Franklin Streets, built in 1794. This corner is now occupied by the well-known crockery dealers and importers, Jones, McDuffee and Stratton.

Geo. H. Walker & Co., Boston.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

The Chamber of Commerce, India and Central Streets, was incorporated in 1885 and is the third organization of that name that has existed in Boston. The first organization was active in 1795, and Thomas Russell was president. The second body was formed in 1836, with William Sturgis as president, and the organization went out of existence in 1843. The present Chamber of Commerce was founded in 1885 by the consolidation of two corporate trade bodies, the Boston Commercial Exchange with three hundred members, and the Boston Produce Exchange with five hundred members. The building is constructed of Milford pink granite and is a massive structure. The corner stone was laid Sept. 20, 1890 and the building was completed in January, 1892, the formal opening taking place Jan. 20 and 21, 1892. The third floor is occupied by the Chamber of Commerce with its Board Room, Secretary's Room, Committee Rooms, Reading Room, Parlors, etc.

T Wharf was named for its shape and was a part of the Barricado.

Commercial Wharf, terminal of the International Steamship Company steamers for Portland, Eastport and St. Johns, also the berth of the steamers from Boston to Provincetown.

Lewis Wharf, 32 Atlantic Avenue, once the property of John Hancock. The terminal of the steamers for Yarmouth and Halifax, Nova Scotia, and for ports of Pictou and Prince Edward Island, also the Savannah Steamers.

South Ferry to East Boston is the next on the water front.

Union Wharf has the U. S. Bonded Warehouses.

Lincoln's Wharf is the berth of the line of steamers to Bath and the Kennebec River.

Battery Wharf, the North Ferry to East Boston, also the berth of the large steamers to Norfolk and Baltimore.

The North Battery was built in 1646, to command the Charles River, and was a battery as late as 1775, when Lord Howe had 13 cannon mounted. Four British regiments embarked here for Bunker Hill, June 17, 1775.

Constitution Wharf, the site of the yard in which was built the frigate "Constitution," 44 guns, in 1794-97. Captured many war vessels and merchantmen. The frigate Argus, 16 guns, and the Boston, 28 guns, built here.

Chelsea Ferry, foot of Hanover Street.

Aspinwall's Wharf above the ferry.

Gray's Wharf belonged to the wealthy merchant, William Gray.

Boston Herald, a morning, evening and Sunday paper, founded 1846; independent in politics. Present building occupied 1878.

The Daily Advertiser, oldest morning paper in Boston. Founded March 3, 1813. Republican.

Evening Record, a one cent paper, published in same office with The Daily Advertiser. Founded 1884. Republican.

Boston Journal, morning, evening and Sunday paper. A Republican paper founded 1833 under the name of the Evening Mercantile Journal; name changed 1837.

Daily Globe, morning evening and Sunday. Democratic.

Boston Post, morning and Sunday. Founded 1831. Democratic.

Boston Transcript, the oldest evening paper in Boston.

Boston Traveller, the first two cent evening newspaper in Boston and the first to display news bulletins.

Old Corner Book Store, corner of Washington and School Streets. Ann Hutchinson lived here in 1634. In 1828 a book store opened by T. N. Carter. Damrell & Upham, who now occupy the store, keep a line of first-class books.

The present building from all that can be learned, may have been erected about the year 1712, by Mr. Thomas Crease, an apothecary, and in all probability was used as a dwelling house, with a small shop on the Cornhill (Washington Street) side, from a very early period after it was built.

Great interest has been expressed in regard to the preservation of this old specimen of the first reconstruction of the buildings of the ancient Cornhill, after the destruction of the old tenements and shops in 1711, and it is to be hoped that the old Brimmer Mansion will be allowed to remain for many years to come, standing in its present form with its quaint appearance and well-known designation, "The Old Corner Bookstore."

27 School Street. Dr. John Warren, brother of Gen. Warren, lived here. He was a surgeon in the Revolutionary army and had charge of the hospitals around Boston.

Latin School, 1634, on School Street in rear of King's Chapel. In 1749 removed to opposite side of School Street.

Cromwell's Head Tavern stood on site of 19 School Street, where Lieut. Col. George Washington was entertained during his visit in 1756.

The French Huguenot Church stood on site 28 School Street and was occupied by them from 1704 to 1748, and from 1788 to 1802 occupied by the congregation of the Church of the Holy Cross, the first Roman Catholic Society in New England, with 120 attendants. In 1774, John Murray, the apostle of Universalism, was stoned by a mob while preaching from the Huguenot pulpit.

City Hall, School Street, built 1862-65, on the site of old one, at a cost of $500,000. It is constructed of Concord granite and was considered, when finished, to have ample accommodations for the city department for many years, but a large number of the departments are located in adjoining buildings. In front of the building is a fine statue of Franklin, erected in 1856, also the statue of Josiah Quincy, erected in 1879. He was a member of Congress, 1805-13; Mayor of Boston, 1823-28; President of Harvard College, 1829-45.

King's Chapel Burying Ground, Tremont Street, was the first place for interments in Boston. It was first mentioned by Gov. Winthrop, Feb. 18, 1630. "Captain Welden, a hopeful young gent and an experienced soldier, died in Charlestown of consumption and was buried at Boston with a military funeral." The remains of the following persons were deposited in this ground: Gov. John Winthrop, 1649, and his two sons, John Winthrop, 1676, and Fitz John Winthrop, 1707, both governors of Connecticut; Gov. John Endicott, 1665; Gov. John Leverett, 1679; Gov. William Shirley, 1771; Gov. John Winslow, 1674; Mary Chilton, 1679, a passenger in the Mayflower and the wife of Gov. Winslow; Lady Andros, 1688; Jacob Sheafe, 1658; Major Thomas Savage, 1682; Capt. Roger Clap, 1690; Rev. John Cotton, 1652; Rev. John Davenport, 1670; Rev. John Oxenbridge, 1674; Rev. Thomas Bridge, 1715; Thomas Bridge, 1713; Prof. John Winthrop, 1776; Wait Still Winthrop, 1717; Adam Winthrop, 1743; Brig. Gen. John Winslow, Revolutionary army; Col. William Dawes, who rode over the Neck to Lexington and Concord to alarm the patriots the night before the battle at Lexington; Oliver Wendell, 1818; Judge Thomas Dawes, 1825; Lieut. Gov. William Phillips, 1827; Lieut. Gov. Thomas Lindall Winthrop, 1841; James Lloyd, 1831; Charles Bulfinch, 1844. Many years ago the ground was surrounded by a brick wall.

King's Chapel, corner of School and Tremont Streets, built of wood in 1688, rebuilt of stone in 1749-54, is a massive building, the walls constructed of Quincy granite. The portico was built in 1789 from funds partly raised by an oratorio in the chapel, at which General Washington attended "attired in a black velvet suit, and gave five guineas." The organ was purchased in England in 1756. The chapel has marble busts of its former pastors Freeman, Greenwood, Peabody and Foote, and mural monuments of Apthorp, Appleton, Lowell, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Joseph May; a marble tablet in memory of General Stevenson, Col. Revere and twelve other members of the parish, who died in the army in 1861-65.

In 1688, Sir Edmund Andros seized a part of the burying ground to erect the chapel. In 1710 it was enlarged. Under the chapel are a number of tombs in which are interred a large number of remains of former members of the society.

The Bellingham-Faneuil Estate was opposite the north end of the Chapel Burial Ground. Here dwelt Bellingham in 1635-41, 1654 and 1666-72, and Peter Faneuil in a stone mansion.

The Old Court House, Court Square, was built in 1833-36, on the site of the prison where Capt. Kidd, the pirate, was confined in 1690, before he was sent to London and executed. In 1851 and 1854 the Sims and Burns riots occurred. Phillips, Higginson, Parker and other anti-slavery leaders with their sympathizers, tried to rescue the negroes from the court house.

Young's Hotel, off Washington Street, in rear of Rogers Building, opposite State Street; built in 1845 on site of Taft's Coffee House, (Cornhill). In 1882 the hotel was greatly enlarged to Court Street.

Christ Church, Salem Street, is the oldest church building in Boston and was erected in 1723. Built of brick and has a tall spire. In the church is a marble bust of George Washington by Houdon. The organ was placed in the building in 1752. The clock was made in 1749. The silver communion service bears the royal arms, some of the pieces bear the date of 1733. The tower contains a chime of eight bells, cast in Gloucester, England. From this tower were hung the lanterns to warn Paul Revere and the patriots that the British troops were to march to Lexington and Concord. Under the church is the crypt, with thirty-three tombs; in one of these the body of Major Pitcairn, who was wounded at Bunker Hill and died soon after, was buried previous to its removal to Westminster Abbey.

Baldwin Place Church, built of wood and dedicated in 1746. New brick church dedicated Jan. 11, 1811. Lot sold Feb. 12, 1865.

Copps Hill Burying Ground, at the North end, was the second ground established in Boston and was opened for burials in 1660. The Colonial Windmill on the highest part of the hill was removed before that date. The British built a redoubt on the north side of the hill in 1775, from which Charlestown was bombarded on the 17th of June, 1775. The hill was named from William Copp, who lived there at first settlement. Here were buried Rev. Increase Mather, Rev. Samuel Mather, Rev. Andrew Eliot, Chief Justice Parker, Capt. Thomas Lake, 1676, Capt Daniel Malcolm, 1769, one of the "Sons of Liberty," Major Samuel Shaw, Capt. Amos Lincoln, Major Nathaniel Heath, Major Edward Carnes, Judge Advocate General Thomas Edwards and many other officers and soldiers of the Revolutionary army. STATE HOUSE.

Suffolk County Jail, Charles Street, opposite the river. Built 1851 and cost $450,000.

Hotel Rexford, corner Bowdoin and Bulfinch Streets and Bulfinch Place; one of the largest hotels in the city and is fireproof. The walls are of white enamelled brick, with large bay windows extending from the second floor to the roof, on the entire front elevations. Has three hundred and fifty rooms; built with all modern conveniences in 1887. In close proximity to the wholesale and retail shopping districts, Post Office, City Hall, theatres, halls, State House, libraries, parks and electric roads, and between the great Northern and Southern railroad stations. Part of the building stands on the site of the home, for forty years, of the celebrated actor William Warren.

Massachusetts General Hospital established 1799 on McLean Street. The granite building was designed by Bulfinch. It is the oldest but one of the hospitals in the country and one of the best organized in the world, with a staff of the most eminent physicians and surgeons. Dr. W. T. G. Morton's discovery of the use of ether in surgery was first introduced to the world at this hospital, the first operation being performed by Dr. John C. Warren, assisted by Dr. Morton.

Beacon Hill. At first settlement of the town three sharp peaks,—Cotton Hill, site of Pemberton Square, Sentry Hill, on the East Park of the State House and Copley's Hill near Louisburg Square,—these three hills gave the first name "Trimountain" to Boston.

The State House on Beacon Hill occupies the site of John Hancock's cow pasture, which the town bought and gave to the state. The corner stone was drawn by fifteen white horses representing the number of states of the Union, in 1795, to its place, and it was laid by Paul Revere and the masonic fraternity, with an oration by Gov. Samuel Adams. The building was designed by Bulfinch and cost $133,333 and was completed in 1798. In 1895 an attempt was made to have the building torn down and rebuilt on a larger scale; but the majority decided to have the old building thoroughly repaired and made partially fireproof, at the same time restoring the original arrangements of the interior as far as possible. Hancock, John Adams, J. Q. Adams, Samuel Adams, Wendell Phillips, Sumner, Long, Winthrop, Webster, Andrew, Banks, Story, Choate, Gerry, Parsons, Cushing, Fisher Ames and other illustrious citizens have been heard in these halls. Receptions were given here to President's Munroe, Jackson, Polk, Tyler, Fillmore, Grant, Johnson, Buchanan, Hayes, and McKinley, Seward, Van Buren, Kit Carson, David Crockett, Kossuth, Lafayette, the Prince of Wales, and the Grand Duke Alexis. Sumner and Wilson were laid in state in Doric Hall. Of the original Representatives who occupied this building ninety-one had been soldiers in the Revolutionary army. The new extension built in 1890-95 cost $5,000,000 and is four times the size of the old building.

The state library has 100,000 books and many rare maps and pamphlets. The Archives on the fourth floor of the new extension, are priceless in value, consisting of original papers from the first settlement of the colony, with Provincial and Revolutionary war papers now arranged in large volumes in most systematic manner, with card index. Memorial Hall contains two hundred and seventy-four flags of the Massachusetts regiments and batteries in the war for the Union, relics from Lexington and Bennington, Chantrey's statue of Washington, statues of Gov. Andrew and General Devens, portraits and historic relics. In front of the old part of the building, a statue of Daniel Webster was erected in 1860 and on the other side stands the statue of Horace Mann, paid for by the school children and dedicated 1869.

The Beacon stood from 1634 to 1789 on Sentry Hill, which then rose eighty feet above the level of the present East Park. A stone and brick monument was completed June 18, 1791 with stone tablets on the base. The monument was removed and the base dug away in 1811, and the stone tablets were placed in Doric Hall on the wall, Feb. 21, 1861. A tall granite column surmounted with a large bronze eagle was built in the centre of the park in 1898, and the original stone tablets taken from the old monument were taken from Doric Hall and fastened to the base of the new monument.

PARK STREET CHURCH.

Park Street Church, corner of Park and Tremont Streets, dedicated May 1, 1809; a prominent landmark. The basement was formerly a crypt and had about thirty-five tombs. The remains were removed to other burying grounds and the tombs removed some years ago. Later the basement was used as a schoolroom and it is now occupied by the W. B. Clark Co., where may be found a complete line of books, stationary, etc.

Park Street was laid out across the Common and first called Sentry Street, and the side now occupied by buildings was then the site of the granary, the almshouse for the aged and poor, the workhouse for idle persons, and the bride-well for the disorderly and insane. These buildings were removed about 1805.

The house on the corner of Park and Beacon Streets was built in 1804. Here Lafayette lived for a week in 1824 as the guest of the city.

Granary Burying Ground, Tremont Street, was the third ground in Boston, and was established in 1660. It received its name from the public granary that stood on the south side of the ground. Here were buried the remains of Gov. Richard Bellingham, Gov. William Dummer, Gov. John Hancock, Gov. Samuel Adams, Gov. James Bowdoin, Gov. Increase Sumner, Gov. James Sullivan, Lieut. Gov. Thomas Cushing, Hon. James Otis, the foremost patriot of the Revolution, Peter Faneuil, Chief Justice Samuel Sewall, Robert Treat Paine, Paul Revere, Josiah Franklin and wife, parents of Benjamin Franklin; the victims of the Boston Massacre, 1770, the Rev. John Baily, Rev. Samuel Willard, Rev. Jeremy Belknap, Rev. John Lothrop, John Phillips, first Mayor of Boston, and many other distinguished citizens and patriots. A few of the officers of the Revolution buried here were Col. John Armstrong, John Hurd, Jr., Capt. John Armstrong, Major Samuel W. Armstrong, Major Robert Williams, Capt. Nicholas Gardner, Lieut. Jabez Smith of the marines, and Surgeon David Townsend, John Hull, mint master, 1652, Edward Rawson, Secretary of the Colony, and Josiah Willard, Secretary of the Province.

TREMONT TEMPLE.

Bromfield Street M. E. Church, corner stone laid April 15, 1806.

Bromfield House, Bromfield Street, formerly Rawson's Lane, was named for Edward Bromfield, 1796. This house was a famous tavern from the early part of this century to 1860. In 1813 this tavern was known by the name of "The Indian Queen."

Music Hall, Winter Street, built 1852, has seats for 2,600 people. Concerts and oratorios are given here. The society, presided over by Theodore Parker many years ago, formerly held services in the hall.

Bellevue Hotel, Nos. 19, 21 and 23 Beacon Street, built 1899, of limestone and gray brick, with ornate balconies. The first floor has hotel offices, café, banquet hall, public and private dining rooms. Above will be ten stories devoted entirely to the hotel sleeping rooms. In the basement are kitchens, laundry, billiard rooms, etc.

The Common was laid out before 1640 as a training field and for the feeding of cattle, and after that time no more land was granted from the Common. Here stood the granary, almshouse, gunhouse, whipping post and pillory, as early as 1659 used as a place for executing criminals, Quakers, Indians, prisoners of war, those convicted of arson, and for robbery, as late as 1797. Tremont Street mall planted in 1728, 1734 and 1785; Beacon Street mall, in 1826; Boylston Street mall, in 1836; wood fence built from 1731 to 1787; wood fence built all around, 1795; iron fence complete all around, 1836. In 1775-76 the Common was a fortified camp with batteries and 1,700 British soldiers. In 1745 the forces for the attack on Louisburg were mustered here. In 1759 the army of Lord Amherst encamped here previous to their march to Canada. Rochambeau's army were assembled here and Washington's army were also paraded and quartered on the Common after the siege of Boston. From the first settlement of the town all important celebrations, parades and festivities were on the Common. The celebration of the introduction of water into Boston, reception and parade in honor of the Prince of Wales, parades and musters of the train bands and militia, Fourth of July celebrations, assembling of the volunteer regiments for the war 1861-65, return of the regiments and batteries. On the large hill stands the Army and Navy Monument, erected by the city 1871-77, to commemorate the services of Boston soldiers and sailors in the war of the Rebellion, at a cost of $75,000. Crispus Attucks Monument standing near the Tremont Street mall, was erected by an appropriation from the Legislature in 1888. The monument commemorates the victims of the tragedy on State Street, known as the Boston Massacre. The Shaw Monument, near the corner of Park and Beacon Streets, opposite the State House, commemorates brave Colonel Shaw and his faithful regiment, the 54th Massachusetts, colored troops. The colonel and a large number of the men were slain in the assault on Fort Wagner, S. C. Near the eastern end of the Frog Pond stood the famous Old Elm until 1876, when it was blown down by a severe wind. The Frog Pond in 1846 was like most ponds, with a mud bottom. Soon after a granite curb was built, a fountain placed near its eastern end and the bottom paved. The heavy iron fence has been removed from Tremont Street and Boylston Street malls, and the gates and gate posts removed from Park Street, West Street and Park Square entrances. The Common contains about forty-eight acres of land. The Brewer Fountain near the Park Street mall was presented to the city by Gardner Brewer. It is constructed of bronze and was designed by Liénard of Paris.

Central Burying Ground, on Boston Common, was the fourth in Boston and was established in 1756. The tombs in this ground were built by the wealthy inhabitants of Boston and were erected on four sides. A large number of these tombs on the south part of the ground were covered over in 1846, when the Boylston Street mall was made. At that time a portion of the contents of the tombs were removed to the two rows of granite tombs facing the western mall, and the remaining tombs were covered. On the construction of the subway these remaining tombs and contents were removed and the remains were buried in a large grave in the northwestern portion of the ground. In the western central portion of the ground a large number of Roman Catholics have been buried, and in the other sections Revolutionary soldiers and strangers. Probably the first Chinaman buried in America was buried in this ground the first of this century. Capt. James Bancroft, Lieut. Marston Watson, Lieut. Thomas Blake and many other officers and soldiers were buried here. Gilbert Stuart, the celebrated artist who was born in 1755, was buried in a tomb in 1828.

SUBWAY INTERIOR.

Covers two acres of ground and has 500 chambers. One of the most popular hotels.

The Terminal Station, Junction of Summer and Federal Streets and Atlantic Avenue. Erected 1897-98. Dedicated Dec. 30, 1898. The first train was run on Sunday Jan. 1, 1899. First train through the subway loop March 9, 1899. The largest railroad station in the world. Built of stone, steel and brick. Total area of land thirty-five acres; total area of land covered by buildings thirteen acres; length of main station eight hundred and fifty feet; width of main station seven hundred and twenty-five feet; length of train shed six hundred and two feet; width five hundred and seventy feet. Thirty-two tracks enter the station, twenty-eight on the main floor and four tracks in the subway loop; length of tracks under the roof four miles; total number of trains seven hundred and ten daily. The building was erected by the Boston Terminal Company, composed of the Boston & Albany Railroad Company, the New England Railroad Company, Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation, Old Colony Railroad Company and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company.

Back Bay District is that part of Boston that was formerly a bay from the Charles river, and was filled about thirty-five years ago with gravel brought from the hills of Dedham. This made land is bounded by Beacon, Arlington and Tremont Streets, and the old Roxbury line.

The Public Garden is a beautiful park of twenty-three acres, south of the Common. Many years ago the whole area of the garden was water, and part of the Back Bay, which also flowed what is now the parade ground on the Common. In 1862 the city graded the ground and laid out the garden. A good-sized pond, with an ornamental bridge thrown across the centre, with the grounds laid out with walks and a beautiful variety of choice trees and shrubs, make a fine landscape. In the spring and fall flowering plants and bulbs are planted. The equestrian statue of Washington is a fine work of art, and was designed by Ball. It cost $42,000, and was paid for by citizens of Massachusetts in 1859-69.

The Ether Monument on the garden near Arlington Street, was given to the city by Thomas Lee in 1868. It commemorates the discovery by Dr. Morton that the inhalation of ether causes insensibility from pain.

THE BOSTON MUSEUM OF FINE ARTS.

Trinity Church, Copley Square, the finest ecclesiastical building in New England, completed 1877. The walls are built of reddish-yellow Dedham granite and brownstone. The tower is two hundred and eleven feet high and forty-six feet square inside, with a pyramidal roof of red akron tiles. The triple-arched porch on the front was built in 1894-97. Among Trinity's rectors were Bishop Parker, Doane, Hopkins, Wainwright, Eastburn, Clark and Phillips Brooks. This society formerly occupied the granite church building destroyed by fire in 1872 on Summer Street.

New Old South Church, Dartmouth Street and Copley Square. Built 1872-75 of Roxbury stone. The great bell tower is 248 feet high. Cost $600,000. The leading Congregational church in New England. Adjoining the church on Boylston Street is the chapel and parsonage. This society formerly occupied the Old South Church.

The Second Church, Copley Square. The society dates from 1649 and their church was on North Square until 1775; Hanover Street from 1779 to 1849; Freeman Place 1850 to 1854; Bedford Street from 1854 to 1872; Copley Square since 1874. Among the pastors have been Increase Cotton and Samuel Mather, Ralph Waldo Emerson, 1829-32, Chandler Robbins, 1833-74, and Robert Laird Collier. Unitarian.

Chauncy Hall School, Copley Square adjoining the Second Church. Founded 1828; erected 1873. This school has been discontinued and is now used by the city of Boston for a Girl's Latin School building.

The Boston Museum of Fine Arts, south side of Copley Square; built of brick, stone and terra cotta. Founded in 1870, and received its land as a gift from the city. Has one of the finest collections of works of art in the world.

The First Church, Berkeley and Marlboro Streets. A beautiful Gothic building; erected in 1868 at a cost of $325,000. The society was organized in Charlestown in 1630 by Winthrop and others; its first house (1632-40) mud-walled and thatched, on site of 27 State Street; its second (1640-1711) and third (1713-1808) on site of 209 Washington Street, and fourth on Chauncy Place, near Summer Street, 1808 to 1868. Colton, Wilson, Foxcroft, Chauncy, Frothingham and Ellis were pastors.

Public Library, Copley Square. Founded 1852; is the largest library in America, and has over 550,000 volumes and 350,000 pamphlets. Erected in 1888-95 at a cost of $2,650,000. Most of the land was given by the state. The building is built of pinkish-gray granite. The building is two hundred and twenty-five feet long, two hundred and twenty-seven feet deep and seventy feet high. Joshua Bates, a native of Boston, but long a resident of London, England, gave $100,000 for the purchase of books, and since that time many generous individuals have given their large private libraries, and donated large sums of money for the use of the library. The city makes a large annual appropriation for the support of the library. The old school building on Mason Street was the first building used for the library, and in 1858 a large new building was completed on Boylston Street at a cost of $365,000. The beautiful halls contain, beside the large number of books, many rare works of art, statues of bronze and marble, oil paintings, marble busts and many valuable historic relics of the city

This association occupies a large brick and stone structure, equipped as a first-class gymnasium, with facilities for swimming, bowling, tennis, racquet, handball, fencing, etc., and has more than 2,000 members on the rolls.

HARVARD BRIDGE.

Geo. H. Walker & Co., Boston.

New Music Hall. Plans have been completed for the new building to be erected at the corner of Massachusetts and Huntington Avenues. The material to be used will be brick and stone. The main entrance on Huntington Avenue has an Ionic portico, with eight stone pillars. The main hall rises higher than the rest of the building, with a pediment at the top. At either corner of the front section is a pavilion which runs into a wing extending the length of the building. Overlooking these wings in the main hall, are clerestory windows. On the Massachusetts Avenue side is a vestibule which makes a straight line through and across the hall interior. The building will have a frontage of one hundred and fifty feet on Huntington Avenue and will extend one hundred feet on Massachusetts Avenue. The total seating capacity of the New Music Hall will be 2,630, two hundred and thirty-three more than the old hall. The floor capacity will be 1,511, the first balcony six hundred and eight, second balcony five hundred and eleven. The hall has an interior length of one hundred and forty feet and a width of seventy-five feet. The main ticket office will be on the Massachusetts Avenue side. The building will cost about $500,000.

TOPOGRAPHY OF EARLY BOSTON.

On approaching the land from Long Wharf, high water mark was reached at what is now the corner of Merchant Row on one side of State Street and Kilby Street on the other. The northerly site of the cove ran above Faneuil Hall and across here to North Street, and followed that street to its junction with Commercial Street. West of State Street a little cove ran in about where Congress Street is, and reached to the corner of Franklin Street. It thus cut off direct approach to Fort Hill, which rose to the southeast.

The water line at Fort Hill, on the south, was substantially the same as today. Broad Street, from Battery March to Federal Street, being substantially the boundary. A sharp turn was made at the junction of Federal and East Streets, and the South Cove stretched west to Washington Street near Essex

BOSTON.

The solid black represents the part which has been filled. A large portion of what is now the principal business district was originally covered by water and was connected with the mainland by a very narrow neck. The Cambridge side of Charles River has also been filled quite extensively.

Street and north of Beach Street. The South Cove ran parallel with Washington Street within one hundred and fifty feet of the street, up to Dover Street, and beyond.

Crossing Washington Street at Dover Street, Back Bay swept up to a little south of Pleasant Street, nearly to the large hill on the Common, taking in all of the parade ground from the burying ground to Beacon Street.

At Beacon Hill, Tremont, Court and Cambridge Streets were at its base, and high water line crossing Cambridge Street and Anderson Street. A peninsula stretching towards the northwest ran across to Brighton Street, with Mill Cove on the east. Here the land extended below Leverett Street and reached nearly to Hanover Street. The water crossed Gouch and Pitts Streets, and Sudbury Street between Bowker and Portland Streets. At where Blackstone Street now is, a canal connected the Mill Pond with the Town Dock, (where the Quincy Market now stands), making the North End an island.

ROXBURY.

Settled in 1630, incorporated as a town but a few days after Boston, and annexed to Boston, January 6, 1868. Here lived John Eliot, the first missionary to the Indians and translator of the Bible into the Indian language. Major Gen. William Heath, one of Washington's generals, resided on his farm near Centre Street. Brig. Gen. John Groaton, a famous officer of the Continental line, died in the cottage on east side of Norfolk House. Col. Joseph Williams lived near the site of the "High Fort." He was a distinguished officer of the French and Indian war. William Pynchon, the founder of Springfield, Mass., was one of the early settlers of Roxbury.

The Roxbury High Fort, one hundred and fifty-eight feet above tide level, is between Beach Street, Glen and Fort Avenues, and was the strongest work constructed by the American army during the siege of Boston, and received a heavy fire from the British batteries on the Common and the Neck, during the battle of Bunker Hill. On the construction of the standpipe for the high service of Water Works, the original earthworks were leveled. By the efforts of patriotic citizens of Roxbury the work was reconstructed on the original lines by the city.

Roxbury Latin School, one of the oldest and most famous in the country, was established in 1645, only nine years after Harvard College. John Eliot and Gov. Thomas Dudley were among its founders, and its early teachers were Judge William Cushing. Gen. Joseph Warren, Gov. Increase Sumner, and Bishop,

Samuel Parker. The original name of the school was "The Grammar School in the easterly part of the town of Roxbury."

First Parish Church Society occupies the church building erected in 1804. The building is on the site of all the buildings erected by this society since it was founded, and is the oldest in Boston, except the First Church Society in Boston.

Greyhound Tavern, Washington Street, nearly opposite Warren Street, opened in 1645. Headquarters for mustering troops in Roxbury for the old French war, and conspicuous in the Revolution. Washington was entertained here.

Eustis Street Burying Ground, corner of Washington and Eustis Streets, Roxbury. This is the oldest ground in Roxbury and was established in 1632. Here were buried Rev. John Eliot, 1690, the apostle to the Indians, his colleague, Rev. Samuel Danforth, and their successors; pastors of the First Parish Church in Roxbury: Rev. Thomas Walter, 1725; Rev. Nehemiah Walter, 1750; Rev. Oliver Peabody, 1752; Rev. Amos Adams, 1775; and Rev. Eliphalet Porter, 1833; Gov. Thomas Dudley, 1653; Gov. Joseph Dudley, 1720; Chief Justice Paul Dudley, 1752; Col. Wm. Dudley, 1743; Capt. John Weld, 1645; Capt. John May (master of the ship "James," 1630 to 1640) 1670; the father and mother of Maj. Gen. Joseph Warren; Robert Calef, who was instrumental in stopping the witchcraft delusion, 1719; Benjamin Thompson, schoolmaster and physician, 1714; Col.* Joseph Williams, French and Indian wars; Brig. Gen. John Groaton of the Continental line, and a large number of officers and soldiers of the early Indian wars, the French and Indian war and the Revolution. Many of the original settlers of Roxbury were buried in this ground, and the names of Weld, Williams, Ruggles, Danforth, Brewer, Morris, Park, Crafts, Lyon, Holbrook, Dorr, Pierpont, Gore, Draper, Mears, Bowen, Denison, Felton, Griggs, Scarborough, Newell, Parker, Payson, Perrin, Seaver, Walter, Whiting, White. Willard, with many others, were the pioneers of Roxbury when it was a wilderness.

Gen. Joseph Warren, born in Roxbury, June 11, 1741, graduated from Harvard College and practiced as a physician, and was a teacher in the Roxbury Latin School. The Warren estate on Warren Street was bought by the general's grandfather. The old mansion is gone, but a modern house, built of Roxbury stone, stands on the site with a tablet inserted in the wall to commemorate the birthplace of the patriot. A sum of money aggregating over $18,000 and twenty bronze cannon have been appropriated through the generous contributions of Roxbury citizens, the city, and the guns from the general government, to erect a suitable monument on the triangular plot of ground nearly opposite the Warren estate. Dr. John Warren, brother of the general, a surgeon in the Revolutionary army, was also born here. He died in 1815, buried from King's Chapel, and the brother's remains are now buried at Mt. Warren, Forest Hills Cemetery. The Warren estate is now owned by Dr. John C. Warren of Boston.

Gen. Nelson A. Miles, the Commander-in-Chief of the U. S. army, went from Roxbury as first lieutenant of a company in the war of the Rebellion.

Col. William Raymond Lee went to the front in command of the 20th Regiment, Mass. Vols.

The Parting Stone, corner of Roxbury and Centre Streets, was placed by Chief Justice Paul Dudley.

William Lloyd Garrison occupied the house No. 125 Highland Street, from 1864 to 1879.

Fellows Athenæum on Millmont Street has 35,000 volumes in the library.

Roxbury has now a population of more than 100,000.

CHARLESTOWN.

Called Mishawum by the Indians; was settled in 1629, and became a city in 1847. Annexed to Boston 1873.

First Church, founded 1632, with thirty-five members, in the "Great House," site of old City Hall. John Harvard preached here; also Jedediah Morse 1789-1820, and M. I. Budington. Present building erected 1834, and the Forman tower has a chime of six bells.

Phipps Street Burying Ground, from Main Street, Charlestown, is the oldest ground in Charlestown, and was established shortly after the first settlement of the town. John Harvard, the founder of Harvard College, was buried here, and a large granite monument, with two white marble tablets with suitable inscriptions, was erected in 1828, on the hill in the centre of the ground. In 1898, a committee of the college graduates caused the marble tablets to be removed, as they were in bad condition, and two beautiful bronze tablets were placed on the monument. Many of the first settlers of the town were buried here and the oldest inscription bears the date 1652. Commissary General Richard Devens and many other officers and soldiers of the Revolution were buried in tombs or graves.

Bunker Hill Monument. A granite obelisk, 221 feet high, on Monument Square, Breeds Hill, Charlestown. Corner stone laid by Lafayette June 17, 1825, and monument dedicated June 17, 1843; Daniel Webster delivered the oration. Cost $150,000. The battle of Bunker Hill was fought June 17, 1775, when 4,000 British veterans attacked 3,000 Americans behind rude breastworks, and after four hours' battle, captured the redoubt. The British lost 1,500; the Americans 450.

A marble statue of Gen. Warren, who was slain at Bunker Hill, stands in the lodge at the base of the monument. Erected 1857.

A bronze statue of Col. William Prescott also stands on the grounds. Erected 1881.

The town was burnt by the British June 17, 1775, during the battle, and the 2,700 inhabitants were forced to flee to towns adjoining. Loss $500,000.

United States Navy Yard. Founded 1800; entrance on Water Street. The yard is between the Charles and Mystic Rivers, and has an area of eighty-seven and a quarter acres; surrounded by a high granite wall and a water front of one and one-half miles. There are seventy-five buildings in the enclosure; commandant's residence, naval museum, naval institute, machine shops and a rope walk, built of granite, 1,361 feet long, where rope is made for the U. S. navy. The great granite dry dock is three hundred and seventy feet long; built 1827-33, at a cost of $994,000. The receiving ship Wabash is moored off the yard, with other vessels.

The New Dry Dock for the Navy Yard was begun April 17, 1899, and is to be completed by the terms of the contract, in thirty months from April 1, 1899, at a cost of $883,400. It will be constructed of stone and concrete, and will be built in cross sections, until the work is completed. The new dock is situated just east and parallel to the old dock, and will be seven hundred and fifty feet long or twice as long as the old dock, and will cost but little more than the old one. Most of the work in docking the vessels will be done by machinery. A huge crane or derrick will travel along the dock on tracks, so that the heavy shores, blocks, tackle, and material needed for repairing vessels may be expeditiously handled. Building this dock at the yard means a great deal for the mechanics of Boston, as on the completion of the great work, the largest ships in the navy will be sent to Boston to be docked and repaired, employing thousands of workmen in all departments of the yard, enabling the Charlestown yard to take its old place as one of the best navy yards of the country.

Soldiers and Sailors' Monument, Monument Square. Dedicated in 1872; cost $20,000. In memory of soldiers and sailors who died 1861-65.

Branch Public Library, in old City Hall, City Square; has a large, valuable library.

State Prison. Built at Prison Point, 1805. North wing built 1829; west wing built 1850; west wing enlarged 1867. Large workshops for the prisoners are within the walls.

WEST ROXBURY.

Set off from Roxbury and incorporated as a town 1855; annexed to Boston 1873.

The Second Parish Church was erected in 1712, on Walter Street; the building was taken down about 1825, and the heavy frame set up on Centre Street, where it now stands. Rev Theodore Parker was for some years pastor of the church.

The Third Church, corner of Centre and Eliot Streets, Jamaica Plain, was founded 1773. Its first pastors were Rev. William Gordon, Rev. Thomas Gray, Rev. Grindall Reynolds and Rev. James W. Thompson.

Brook Farm, a community formed by Hawthorne, Ripley, Dana, Alcott and others in 1844-47. The farm is a mile from West Roxbury station on the banks of the Charles River.

La Grange Street Burying Ground was the second ground in Roxbury. It was established by a vote of the town July 21, 1683. Some of the original settlers of Roxbury were buried here.

Walter Street Burying Ground was established in 1712, and is the third oldest ground in what was Roxbury. On the front portion of this ground formerly stood the Second Parish Church of Roxbury, now known as the First Church of West Roxbury. The heavy frame of the church now stands on Centre Street. The oldest gravestone standing bears the date 1722. Here were buried John Bridge, colonial auditor, Capt. Jonathan Hale of Glastonbury, Conn., and a large number of Revolutionary soldiers who died in the army hospitals in Jamaica Plain in 1776.

Eliot Burying Ground, on Eliot Street, Jamaica Plain, is the fourth oldest ground in what was Roxbury, and was established in 1785. This ground belongs to the First Parish of Jamaica Plain, and is in the rear of the church. There are a large number of tombs and graves, and many familiar names in the history of Roxbury may be seen on the gravestones. Capt. Lemuel May, who commanded a company at Lexington alarm, was buried here in 1805, and many a brave soldier of the Revolution may be traced by his epitaph.

Forest Hills Cemetery, West Roxbury, consecrated 1848, has an area of two hundred and twenty-five acres. The large gateway of Gothic architecture, is constructed of Roxbury pudding stone taken from the quarries in the vicinity. The chapel and offices are constructed of the same stone, all being trimmed with light sandstone. The large receiving tomb is but a short distance from the gateway, and opposite, on a hill, rises a tall bell tower, also built of stone. The cemetery is one of the best laid out grounds on the landscape plan in the country. The main avenues and paths follow the natural topography of the land, with the lots fronting on the paths, with ample space reserved for effective ornamental planting of trees, shubbery, vines, and plants in profusion. The whole ground presents a beautiful diversity of hills, valleys and lakes, with views from the hills and ledges, unsurpassed.

Many distinguished men were buried here; Maj. Gen. Joseph Warren, his brother, Dr. John Warren, Maj. Gen. William Heath, Brig. Gen. Henry Jackson, Colonel John May, Major Ephraim May, all of the Revolutionary army; Brig. Gen. H. A. S. Dearborn, Ex-Gov. Alexander H. Rice, Ex-Gov. William Gaston, Hon. Marshall P. Wilder, Admiral John A. Winslow, Admiral Henry Knox Thatcher, William Lloyd Garrison, Rev. Jacob M. Manning, Rev. James F. Clarke, Rev. Alonzo A. Miner, Rev. Dr. Gordon, E. L. Davenport, John Gilbert, and Andrew Carney. In the soldiers' lot, dedicated to the soldiers of Roxbury who were killed in the war for the Union, are buried soldiers who have died since their return from the field. A large bronze statue of a soldier was erected in the lot in 1867.

Mount Hope Cemetery contains one hundred and seven and a quarter acres. This ground is also laid out on the landscape plan, and has many beautiful monuments. The soldiers' monument of heavy artillery, donated by the United States government, and other large lots set apart for societies, have handsome monuments. This ground is controlled by the city of Boston.

Sir Francis Bernard, John Hancock, Gov. Bowdoin, Commodore Loring and Francis Parkham lived in Jamaica Plain.

DORCHESTER.

Settled in 1630. The first meeting house was erected in 1631 at the corner of Pleasant and East Cottage Streets. In 1635 a mill was erected by Israel Stoughton, and in 1634 a bridge over the Neponset River was completed. The first general court met in 1634, and Dorchester was represented by three delegates. Annexed to Boston in 1870.

The First Parish Church organized May 20, 1630, and the first service was held in the open air. Rev. Richard Mather served thirty-three years in this church, Rev. John Davenport forty-eight and Rev. Thaddeus M. Harris forty-three years.

The Second Church, founded 1808. In eighty years it had but three pastors; Rev. John Codman, D. D., Rev. James H. Means, D. D., and Rev. E. U. Packard, D. D.

The Pierce House is probably the second oldest house standing in America; erected in 1635, and is now in the hands of that family.

The Blake House, on Dorchester way, dates from 1670.

The First Free Public School was undoubtedly opened in this town in 1639, as the town records show.

Henry Knox and Daniel Webster dwelt in a colonial mansion at Ashmont.

North Dorchester Burying Ground, corner of Stoughton and Boston Streets, is the oldest ground of what was the town of Dorchester, and was established in 1633. There are a large number of tombs, the most ancient being in the oldest part of the ground near the corner of Stoughton and Boston Streets. Here were buried Rev. Richard Mather, father of Rev. Increase Mather, and grandfather of Rev. Cotton Mather, Lieut. Gov. William Stoughton, Maj. Gen. Humphrey Atherton, Col. Hopestill Hall, Brig. Gen. Hatch, Brig. Gen. Stephen Badlam and many other distinguished citizens of the town, officers and soldiers of the early Indian wars, French and Indian war, and the Revolution.

South Burying Ground, on Washington Street, near Lower Mills, was established in 1814.

Norfolk Street Burying Ground was established in 1848, the land having been donated by Rev. John Codman, D. D., whose remains were removed to this ground the same year.

Cedar Grove Cemetery, on Milton, Adams and Granite Streets, contains thirty-eight acres and borders on the Neponset River. The landscape plan was adopted in laying out the ground, and all natural features of the original purchase were retained. Several societies have large lots with artistic monuments. The cemetery is controlled by a board of trustees chosen by the proprietors.

SOUTH BOSTON.

Part of Dorchester until 1804, when it was annexed to Boston, at that time having but ten families in the peninsula.

Thomas Park, on the hill known as Dorchester Heights, was laid out as a public park by the city. On this ground a granite monument was erected some years ago to commemorate the patriots who constructed earthworks, and placed cannon here that compelled the British troops to evacuate Boston.

Hawes Burying Ground, established 1816, has an area of 16,800 square feet of land and adjoins Union Burying Ground, which is a private cemetery.

St. Augustine's Cemetery consecrated 1818. In 1833, the chapel was built and a number of tombs built in the crypt. Owned by Roman Catholics.

Perkins Institute and Massachusetts School for the Blind. The buildings stand on Dorchester Heights and are conspicuous landmarks seen for miles from the land and sea. The institution was named in memory of Col. Thomas H. Perkins, its chief benefactor. Dr. Samuel G. Howe was connected with the institution for many years. The state appropriates $30,000 annually towards its maintenance, and the funds from other income are about $15,000.

Carney Hospital on Old Harbor Street, founded 1865 by Andrew Carney, a wealthy merchant of Boston. In charge of Sisters of Charity.

A large number of machine shops, boiler works, rolling mills, wood planing mills, and a large plant for the construction of iron and steel vessels are located in this district.

A foundry for the construction of large naval guns, employing many skilled workmen during the war 1861-65, is also here, and is now engaged in furnishing the government with large castings for the large disappearing gun carriages for the forts.

On the water front of the harbor and Fort Channel, large docks and warehouses have been constructed, and the railroad companies have secured a large area for their freight terminals.

BRIGHTON.

Settled as Little Cambridge, 1635; became a parish 1779; a town, 1807; annexed to Boston, 1874. Chestnut Hill Reservoir and Reservation on the border of Brighton and Brookline and Newton is connected with the park system of Boston by Commonwealth Avenue and Beacon Street. The old mill dam (Beacon Street) was the roadway between Charles River and Back Bay, and was the road to Brookline and Brighton, and tolls were charged.

Evergreen Cemetery, near Chestnut Hill Reservoir, established 1850, contains sixteen acres. On this ground stands the soldiers' monument erected by the town in memory of her soldiers who died in 1861-65.

EAST BOSTON.

Noddle's Island was fortified by Samuel Maverick before 1630, and again fortified in 1776; also in 1814. In 1833 but one family resided on the island. Maverick Church founded 1836, and church building erected 1844-45. From

PLAYSTEAD, FRANKLIN PARK.

1836 the Eastern Railroad and Cunard Line of English steamers located here. The Maverick House, a large hotel, was erected, and the largest shipyards built some of the finest clipper ships in the world. Donald McKay built the Great Republic. The Atlantic Works build or repair iron or steel ships. The Leyland Line steamers are each five hundred and twenty feet long and 16,000 tons capacity.

The Commonwealth, by right of eminent domain, has taken 4,312,500 square feet of flats, 3,000,000 square feet of these flats being owned by the East Boston Company. This company has plans under consideration for the filling of 5,000,000 square feet of flats and marsh inside of the sea wall. They have recently acquired the real estate of the Maverick Land Company, comprising some 4,000,000 square feet, also the property of the Equity Realty Company, comprising over 200,000 square feet, which will give the East Boston Company the ownership of practically all the land filled and unfilled in what was formerly Noddle's Island. In all they have over 37,000,000 square feet, or more than eight hundred and fifty acres within two miles of City Hall.

Embraced by the shores of East Boston, Winthrop and Governor's Island, lies an area of a mile square of flats, beyond the lines of any possible pier heads. With the exception of its channels this area is mud flats, for the most part exposed at low water, of a material easily and cheaply excavated, (a considerable portion of it by pump dredging), all of which could be used in filling the adjacent wharves and territory thereto adjoining. Such a development would not only increase the wharf and dock accommodations, but would give a fine anchorage basin completely protected from wind and waves.

Wood Island Park has eighty acres of lawn, drives and planted ground, with a fine harbor view.

Large docks, warehouses and machine shops are located on the water front.

PARKS AND PARKWAYS IN BOSTON.

Under the Supervision of Boston Park Commissioners.

Island with the gray granite walls of Fort Independence. The castle on this island was commenced in 1634, the commander killed by lightning July 16, 1664; repaired and enlarged, 1696; rebuilt and named Fort William, 1705; the block house blown up by British, March 27, 1776; criminals confined there, Feb. 1786; ceded to United States, Aug. 18, 1798; named Fort Independence, July, 31, 1799. On the left of the channel is Governor's Island, granted to Gov. Winthrop in 1632, and held by the family till 1798, when it was sold to the United States. Fort Winthrop was begun in 1808, and water batteries now run down to the shore.

Apple Island is between Governor's Island and Winthrop, and was bought by the city of Boston in 1867.

Thompson's Island on the right, beyond Castle Island, is the farm school founded in 1814 and removed to the island in 1835. In 1626 it was an Indian trading post, and was afterwards used by the colonists as a pasturage for cattle.

Spectacle Island is now occupied by a factory for making fertilizers, etc.

Deer Island is on the left of the channel with city institutions, House of Industry, House of Reformation for Girls, Truant School, etc. Here were captives several hundred Indian prisoners in 1676. A light is on the headland.

Long Island, occupied by Massachusetts Volunteers previous to their departure to the front, 1861-62, is now used as a home for the city's poor. On the bluff is the well-known Long Island Light, and the United States government is erecting a strong battery of modern guns for the defense of Broad Sound. A heavy sea wall was built here several years ago, Gallop's Island, just below Long Island. Here are located the hospital buildings of the quarantine station.

Lovell's Island is the wharf and storage for the United States lighthouse service.

Nix's Mate beyond was Bird Island and contained twelve acres in 1636. Pirates were gibbeted here in 1724, and also a burial place for pirates in 1798. The selectmen of Boston attempted to protect the land from the inroads of the sea in 1818, but the land disappeared at low water in 1825. A stone monument is now built upon the rocks, with a light.

Rainsford Island is occupied by the city almhouse and has a number of large buildings.

Fort Warren, built on George's Island, (sold to U. S. 1846); fort commenced 1833; works completed 1850; garrisoned by Massachusetts militia, 1861-65; rebel prisoners confined 1862; walls greatly strengthened and enlarged and heavy breech-loading guns, with disappearing carriages, mounted 1898.

The Great Brewster was bought by the city of Boston in 1848, for $4,000. Boston Light, built in 1783; Bug Light, built 1856. Middle Brewster, Outer Brewster and Shag or Egg Rocks are the islands on the ocean front.

Minot's Ledge sold to United States 1847; lighthouse destroyed by storm April 16, 1851; new lighthouse completed Nov. 16, 1860.

The harbor was closed as a port of entry by the British, May 10, 1774; blockaded in the embargo excitement, Jan. 23, 1809; ice cut for the English steamer by John Hill, Feb. 5, 1844; great improvements begun by United States government, 1869.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT.

"Greater Boston" comprises the city of Boston and a district with a radius of ten miles from the City Hall, with a population of 1,250,000 and a valuation of $2,000,000,000, Jan. 1, 1899. According to the state census of 1895, Boston had a population of 496,920; Cambridge 81,643; Lynn 62,354; Somerville 52,200; Chelsea 31,264; Malden 29,708; Newtons 27,590; Waltham 20,876; Quincy 20,712; Everett 18,573; Brookline 16,164; Medford 14,474; Woburn 14,178; Melrose 11,965; Hyde Park 11,826; Wakefield 8,304; Waltham 7,788; Revere 7,423; Arlington 6,515; Dedham 7,211; Stoneham 6,284; Winchester 6,150; Milton 5,518; Saugus 4,497; Winthrop 4,192; Lexington 3,498; Swampscott 3,259; Belmont 2,843; making twelve cities and sixteen towns with a population of nearly 1,000,000.

Its geographical area is two hundred and seventy-three and seven-hundredths square miles in these twenty-eight municipalities.

METROPOLITAN PARK SYSTEM.

Middlesex Fells Reservation. On Feb. 2, 1894, there were taken 1,583 acres of land (by the Acts of 1893): in the cities of Malden, (61 acres); Medford, (362 acres); towns of Winchester, (287 acres); Stoneham, (668 acres) and Melrose, (205 acres); which with the water reservation in the vicinity of Spot Pond, and the Winchester Reservoirs completed the Middlesex Reservation of 3,022.43 acres. There are in the reservation two well-marked north and south valleys. The eastern valley is marked by Spot Pond, Wright's Pond and Intervale Brook, and the western by the Winchester reservoir and Bowery Brook. Spot Pond has an elevation of one hundred and forty-eight feet above tide water and supplies three municipalities with water; and the Winchester Reservoirs are a little higher. Pine Hill two hundred and forty feet high; Silver Mine Hill, and Winthrop Hill culminates northward in Bear Hill three hundred and twenty feet high. The largest area of continuously high land is found in the southeastern part of the Fells, an area of nearly a square mile, rising above the two hundred feet contour and culminating in Cairn Hill three hundred feet high.

The early name of this region was "The Rocks" and afterward until a recent period "The Five Mile Woods." In 1634 Governor Craddock was granted lands. His property of about 3,500 acres included a large share of the southern part of the Fells. Great quantities of timber cut in this locality were transported to Medford to be used in the construction of ships on the banks of the Mystic River, the first ship was constructed in the colony, when the Blessing of the Bay was launched, and here also Governor Craddock's agents began the construction of vessels as early as 1634.

Blue Hills Reservation. On Dec. 29, 1893, the eastern and east middle sections of the reservation were taken by the commission, followed on Jan. 5, 1894, by the taking of the west middle sections, the reservation having an area in the city of Quincy of 2,530 acres; the towns of Milton 1,314 acres and Canton 109 acres, thereby completing the Blue Hills Reservation, with an area of 3,953 acres.

A gift of six hundred and ninety-seven acres of woods and beautiful intervals south of Great Blue Hill, and almost surrounded by Ponkapoag Pond, was received under the will of the late Henry L. Pierce. This estate at Ponkapoag village, is partly in Canton and partly in Randolph. The homestead with one hundred and fifty-seven acres of land is subject to life estates; the remainder, consisting of five hundred and forty acres of woodland and meadow, is immediately available for park purposes. The highest point of land of the Great Blue Hill is six hundred and thirty-five feet above tide water; the range of hills is the most prominent topographical feature of eastern Massachusetts, and of the entire seacoast from New Hampshire line to Florida. On the summit of the hill the United States government has an observatory.

Stony Brook Woods. On April 30, 1894, the first takings were made for this reservation, including a portion of the West Roxbury Parkway; finally on Sept. 6, the last takings were made, making a total of two hundred and eighty-five acres in Hyde Park, and one hundred and ninety acres in West Roxbury four hundred and seventy-five acres in all.

Geo. H. Walker & Co., Boston.

MYSTIC VALLEY PARKWAY, WINCHESTER.

This reservation was connected with the Boston Park System by both commissions taking at the same time land for a parkway, extending from the Arnold Arboretum to the Stony Brook Woods Reservation by the way of Bellevue Hill. These two takings made Oct. 18, 1894, included an area of one hundred and fifty-six acres of that portion of the parkway between Weld Street and Washington Street, being the Bellevue Hill section of the Metropolitan Commission. The section from Weld Street to the Arnold Arboretum was taken by the Boston Park Commission.

Bellevue Hill rises three hundred and forty-seven feet above tide water and is the highest point of land in Boston. In the centre of the reservation directly south of Bellevue Hill is Turtle Pond, from which Stony Brook flows south and southeast through a wilderness. Turtle Pond is one hundred and thirty feet above tide water, while the rocky hills rising abruptly around the basin have heights ranging from a little less than two hundred feet in the Perch, two hundred and twenty-two feet in the Overbrook Hill, two hundred and forty-four feet in Milkweed Hill and two hundred and fifty-six feet in Bearberry Hill.

Beaver Brook. Famous in song and story for its beautiful scenery, with ponds and silver pools, miniature rapids and water falls, its banks covered with wild plants and hardy flowering shrubs, its waters winding through the forest, appearing here and there in the openings, giving an ever changing landscape. "On Jan. 27, 1631-32, the governor (Winthrop) and some company with him went up the Charles River about eight miles above Watertown. They named the first brook on the north side of the river, Beaver Brook, because the beaver had shorn down divers great trees there, and made divers dams across the brook."

Revere Beach Reservation comprises all of Revere Beach and land in Winthrop, containing a total of 66.19 acres. The taking of this beautiful beach, ensures the keeping of all objectionable features from the ocean front, and the construction of a wide parkway along the rear of the beach for a number of miles; the whole subject to restrictions.

Lowell Memorial Park. A field in Cambridge at the rear of "Elmwood," bought as a memorial to James Russell Lowell; has been transferred to the care of the Metropolitan Park Commission, one-third of the purchase money having been paid by the Commonwealth and the remaining two-thirds by popular subscription. The track contains 140,000 square feet of land.

Mystic Valley Parkway. The town of Winchester and the city of Boston purchased lands near the Winchester Station, where the parkway was laid out. This land has been transferred to the Metropolitan Park Commission, and the Metropolitan Water Board has now succeeded the city of Boston as the owner of the Mystic Water System, comprising part of the Abbajona River, the Upper Mystic Lakes and adjacent lands. These lands and waters will be used as a part of the Mystic Valley Parkway.

RAVINE ROAD, MIDDLESEX FIELDS.

Neponset River Parkway. It is designed to connect the Blue Hills with the Stony Brook Woods Reservation, and thence by the West Roxbury Parkway with the Boston Park System at the Arnold Arboretum. The first section of this connection was acquired in 1898, and extends from Mother Brook at the southerly end of the Stony Brook Woods Reservation to Hyde Park Avenue in Readville, a part of Hyde Park. Lands for the second section of the parkway up the banks of the Neponset River to Paul's Bridge were acquired in 1898.

Charles River Reservation. A frontage of nineteen miles has been secured between Newton Upper Falls and Dedham, comprising 555.56 acres, and other sections along the river banks will soon be secured.

Middlesex Fells Parkway. From Broadway, Somerville, to Beaver Dam and Pine Hill, Middlesex Fells. Reservation four miles long.

The area of all the reservations taken to Jan. 1, 1899, comprises Blue Hills, 4,777.84 acres; Middlesex Fells, 3,022.43 acres, (including 1,200 acres of holdings of water boards, under the care and control of the commission); Stony Brook Woods, 460.64 acres; Charles River, 555.26 acres; Beaver Brook, 58.08; Hemlock Gorge (Charles River), 24.46 acres; Revere Beach, 66.19 acres; King's Beach, 3.91 acres; West Roxbury Parkway, 156 acres, making a grand total of 7,904.81 acres.

METROPOLITAN WATER.

The Metropolitan Water Board was established under the provisions of Chapter 488 of the acts of the year 1895. Under this act, it is the duty of the board to construct, maintain and operate a system of water works, in accordance with plans and recommendations submitted by the State Board of Health in that year, and the board was to supply a sufficient supply of pure water for the cities of Boston, Chelsea, Everett, Malden, Medford, Newtons and Somerville, and the towns of Belmont, Hyde Park, Melrose, Revere, Watertown and Winthrop. The act further requires that other cities and towns, any part of which are within ten miles of the State House, shall be admitted into the Metropolitan Water District on such payment of money as the board shall determine, and also provide to supply water to companies using pipes and water systems in towns within said ten miles, and for permitting the board to furnish water to still other cities and towns and water companies.

The Legislature authorized the issue of bonds to the extent of $27,000,000, the proceeds to be applied to carrying out the purposes of the act.

The great features of the scheme were the construction of a dam and storage reservoir upon the south branch of the Nashua River, the taking of the waters of that river and diverting them into the Sudbury System of the city of Boston, and the making of the waters of the south branch of the Nashua River, in connection with the waters of the Cochituate and Sudbury Systems belonging to the city of Boston, available for the whole Metropolitan District as their future water supply.

The entire water works for the supply and storage of water for the city of Boston, west of the Chestnut Hill Reservoir and Spot Pond and the lands immediately surrounding the pond, were taken by the board the first day of January, 1898, and the board began supplying water to the city of Boston and several other cities and towns in the Metropolitan Water District. The Sudbury Reservoir when completed will, with the completion of the Wachusett Reservoir, be by far the largest storage reservoir in New England; will have an area of about two square miles, an average depth of nineteen feet, and will have a storage capacity of about 7,500,000,000 gallons.

Chestnut Hill Pumping Station, when all the additions are made, the maximum daily capacity of the engines will be 70,000,000 gallons for the high service and 105,000,000 gallons for the low service.

The construction of the Wachusett Dam at Clinton, and of the Wachusett Reservoir, will afford a storage capacity surpassed in the world by only the Periyar Reservoir in India.

The board in anticipation of the takings to be made of the works of Boston, deemed it advisable to change in some respects the designations which had been applied to the various dams, reservoirs and aqueducts, not only of those built by the city of Boston, but of those in process of construction by the board. The names of the reservoirs are given as follows:

Wachusett Reservoir. The reservoir, building upon the south branch of the Nashua River, called hitherto the Nashua Reservoir in Clinton, Boylston, West Boylston and Sterling.

Sudbury Reservoir. The reservoir begun by the city of Boston in Southborough and Marlborough, hitherto known as Reservoir No. 5.

Framingham Reservoir No. 1. The Boston Sudbury System, hitherto known as Basin No. 1, Framingham.

Framingham Reservoir No. 2. The reservoir in Framingham and Ashland, hitherto known as Basin No. 2.

Framingham Reservoir No. 3. The reservoir in Framingham, hitherto known as Basin No. 3.

Ashland Reservoir. The reservoir in Ashland, hitherto known as Basin No. 4.

Hopkinton Reservoir. The reservoir in Hopkinton and Ashland, hitherto known as Basin No. 6.

Whitehall Reservoir. The reservoir in Hopkinton, hitherto known as Whitehall Pond.

The Cochituate Lake.

The Chestnut Hill Reservoir.

Spot Pond.

METROPOLITAN SEWERS.

The Board of Metropolitan Sewerage Commissioners was created by Chapter 439, Acts of 1889, and we present a short description and review of the work accomplished by the board since its organization.

The opening of the Neponset Valley System in 1898, marks the completion of the third large system of Metropolitan sewers now completed and operated by the Commonwealth, and together with the Charles River and North Metropolitan Systems, affords relief for twenty-two cities and towns of the Metropolitan district.

These three systems, traversing the valleys of the Neponset, Charles and Mystic Rivers, discharge directly or indirectly with tide water, the Neponset Valley and Charles River Systems through the Boston main drainage at Moon Island and the North Metropolitan System through its output into deep tidal currents off Deer Island. The work of constructing these systems was entered upon in 1890, soon after the organization of the board, and has progressed steadily until its practical completion in the early part of 1898. The Charles River System, completed first, was built practically as outlined by the State Board of Health in its report on drainage of the Charles and Mystic Rivers (1889) and sewers with the exception of the cities of Cambridge and Somerville, all the cities and towns in the Charles River valley from Waltham to and including part of the Back Bay district of the city of Boston. The length of this system is 8.098 miles. Its course beginning at Waltham, runs in general parallel to and close by the banks of the Charles River, discharging into the Boston improved sewerage at a point in Huntington Avenue opposite Gainsborough Street. Surveys were made in the fall of 1890, and ground was broken for construction in the spring of 1891, and the system was completed in the spring of 1892.

The North Metropolitan System serves the cities and towns of the Metropolitan district, situated in the valley of the Mystic River and so much of Charles River valley as lies north of the Charles River and its tributaries, and has a total length of 49.626 miles, necessitating the operation of four pumping plants, one at North Somerville, one at Charlestown, another at East Boston, and one at Deer Island, near the outfall. The main line beginning at Stoneham, traverses the valleys of the Malden and Mystic Rivers, is joined by four separate branches, and continues through East Boston and Winthrop to the outfall off the easterly end of Deer Island.

Geo. H. Walker & Co., Boston.

STATE ROAD BUILT BY HIGHWAY COMMISSION.

The North Metropolitan System, with the exception of the extensions, Wakefield, Stoneham, Lexington, Malden and Everett branches (which are now nearly completed) was completed and in operation early in 1896. In the same year work was begun upon the Neponset Valley System, the last of the systems constructed by the board. This system serves a district including six cities and towns situated in the Neponset and Charles River valleys, and is near the Charles River, Mother Brook and Neponset River from Newton and Brookline at its upper end to a point in Central Avenue, Dorchester, discharging into the Dorchester interception of the Boston main drainage works near Granite Bridge. The system was practically completed and put into operation during the year 1898, and has a total length of 11.30 miles. The entire cost of the systems thus far constructed, including land damages, is as follows :

North Metropolitan System	$5,116,695.63
Charles River System	789,134.27
Neponset Valley System	821,602.32
Making the total expenditures to date of	$6,727,432.22

The Legislature appropriated $30,000 in 1898, to carry forward the investigation upon the proposed high level sewer for the relief of the Charles River and Neponset valleys, and the work is still in progress.

STATE HIGHWAYS.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts since 1893, has undertaken to construct first-class highways throughout the state, under certain conditions. The number of miles of road completed to the present time is two hundred and six miles, and one hundred and sixty-two miles have been accepted by the commission. No formal acceptance of a road is made until it has been in actual use by the public for three months from the date of the declaration of the engineer in charge of the division in which the road is located, then the highway is completed.

RAILROADS.

Boston & Maine Railroad, largest railway system in New England, owns leases and operates 1,210.03 miles of road. The Western Division is the original Boston & Maine Railroad, formed in 1842, and its connections. The Eastern Division, the old Eastern Railroad, chartered in 1836, and its connections. The

SUBWAY ENTRANCE, PARK STREET STATION.

Northern Division, the Boston & Lowell and Concord Railroad, and its system in northern New England, connecting with Canada and the West. The original Boston & Lowell Railroad chartered in 1830, and opened in 1835. Terminal facilities on the Mystic River front in Charlestown with large docks and grain elevator.

Boston & Fitchburg Railroad, chartered 1842, opened 1845, total length of lines owned, leased and operated by the company four hundred and thirty-six miles. The Hoosac Tunnel, acquired from the state in 1887. Northern points in Canada reached through leased roads. Boston freight terminal at deep water, at docks in Charlestown.

Boston & Albany Railroad. Successor of the Boston & Worcester railways, chartered in 1831. Opened to Newton 1834; completed to Worcester 1835; and the Western from Worcester to the New York line completed in 1841. Total length of line now owned, leased and operated 375.70 miles. The corporation owns and operates the Grand Junction Railroad, making deep water connections at East Boston, where are extensive wharves and grain elevators. An elevator on the corner of Chandler and Berkeley Streets, South End, also belongs to this company.

Old Colony Division, N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., chartered 1844; the original line between Boston and Plymouth, and is now the second largest railway system in New England. It covers the southeastern section of Massachusetts; and the western part of the state through leased lines; Rhode Island and Connecticut through the Providence Division, (The old Boston & Providence R. R. chartered in 1831), and New York, by the all-rail Shore Line, and the Fall River, Providence and Stonington Sound steamboat lines. The system includes five hundred and seventy-seven miles of railroad. In 1893, the entire road was leased to the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. Company.

New York and New England Railroad. Organized 1873, successor of the Boston, Hartford & Erie Railroad, organized 1863. The total length of leased and operated lines is about six hundred miles. The system has been leased to the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. Company, and the depot corner of Summer and Federal Streets has been removed and the site is now occupied by the great Southern Terminal Station.

Electric Railways have been constructed throughout the eastern part of Massachusetts from New Hampshire line to Buzzard's Bay and beyond Worcester. Many of these lines have been carried through and opened up heretofore inaccessible tracts of beautiful country, away from steam railroads, and have created new enterprises that have built up those sections. It has been found that notwithstanding the large number of passengers now carried by these electric railways, that the regular passenger traffic of the steam railroads has not diminished as the electric roads act as auxiliary to the steam roads, giving a ick passage to and from the stations, passengers on the steam roads using electricians instead of a carriage to and from the depot. Large cities and towns have quite a number of electric lines radiating from their center, acting as leaders for the steam roads. In Boston all lines have been consolidated under the name of Boston Elevated Railway Company. This line has leased the subway for twenty years, and is constructing several lines of elevated tracks to the suburbs.

The various electric railway lines will be found on the maps accompanying this guide.

NORTH SHORE.

Winthrop. Incorporated March 27, 1852, a peninsula with about eight miles of beach. The Deane Winthrop house is the oldest in the town. The government has built a powerful mortar battery on the heights commanding the shore and the northern approach to Boston harbor. A battery of heavy guns will be mounted on Glover's Cliff, below the mortar battery.

The vicinity of the ocean shore is crowded with summer cottages, and the center of the town has been built up and is occupied by permanent residents.

Reached by the Winthrop branch of the Revere Beach and Lynn Railway.

Revere. Incorporated March 24, 1871, as North Chelsea; name changed to Revere, April 3, 1871. Revere is famous for its beautiful beach, which is several miles long, lying between Winthrop and Nahant, the Point of Pines being the northern termination of the beach. The Metropolitan Park Commission have taken the entire shore from Glover's Cliff to the Point of Pines, removing all objectionable objects and clearing off the beach. A beautiful, broad parkway has been constructed some distance from high water mark, and follows the line of the entire ocean front.

The handsome new Town Hall, old Yeaman's House, and the ancient Pratt house are objects of interest.

Reached by the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railway, which runs along the edge of the beach.

Nahant. Settled in 1637; incorporated May 29, 1853; a select watering place. Agassiz, Prescott, Wendell Phillips, Eliot, Longfellow, Henry Cabot Lodge and others of note have frequented this beautiful summer resort.

Egg Rock is eighty-six feet above sea level. Long Beach is a fine beach to Lynn. Pulpit Rock and Natural Bridge are objects of interest.

A rocky promontory, the oldest watering place on the north shore, Bass Point, is the southwestern point of the peninsula.

Lynn. Settled in 1637, now a city of 55,000 inhabitants; site of the first iron works in the United States, at Saugus; Moll Pitcher dwelt near High Rock. The oldest burying ground and the Quaker burying ground are objects of great interest. The large City Hall is near Lynn Common, where the beautiful soldiers' monument stands, erected in memory of the soldiers who died in 1861-65. Pine Grove Cemetery is the modern ground of the city, and is kept in excellent order. The old Hathorne house is now used for the Lynn Hospital.

Swampscott. Settled in 1637; incorporated 1852. King's Beach and Whale's Beach are reached by the road which runs from Ocean Street. A favorite summer resort.

Marblehead. Settled in 1629; incorporated May 2, 1649; one of the oldest towns in New England. The principal vocation of the inhabitants since its first settlement has been as seamen in fishing vessels, privateers, and coasting vessels. Over 1,200 men served in the army and navy in the Revolutionary war. The greatest object of interest is the old burying ground on the hill, where the first settlers are buried. Brig. Gen. John Glover, one of the bravest and most distinguished officers of the Revolution, who died in 1797, is buried here. Capt. James Mugford, who fought with one small vessel, a large British fleet, was killed during the fight and buried here. He died May 19, 1776. James Dennis Hammond, one of the heroes of the frigate, Constitution, died 1849, also a large number of soldiers and sailors of the Revolution buried here.

In Grove Street burying ground, Col. Azor Orne was buried.

Abbott Hall, built 1877 from a fund left by Benjamin Abbott. All the town offices and Public Library are in this building.

St. Michael's Episcopal Church and small burying ground adjoining. Church founded 1714. One of the early rectors, Rev. David Mosson, settled in Virginia. He performed the marriage ceremony between George Washington and the widow Custis. Nearly opposite the North Church, Elbridge Gerry, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, was born. He was governor of Massachusetts and vice President of the United States, and is buried in Washington, D. C., where he died.

On Front Street, old Tucker house, 1640; Glover Street, house of Col. Jonathan Glover; 169 Washington Street, mansion of Col. Jeremiah Lee, 1776; Old Powder House, 1755; Orne Street, site of Fountain Inn and Well; old Town House, 1727; Orne house, Franklin and Washington Streets; Old Fort Burying Hill; the Old Tavern; Col. William R. Lee, of the Revolution, lived in a house south of the Common; Capt. James Mugford, who captured the British powder ship, and was afterwards killed, lived on the corner of Back and Mugford Streets; old Custom House; Fort Sewall; The Old Brig, Orne Street corner of Pond Street; Parson Barnard's house, Franklin Street; Castle Rock; Marblehead Neck; Marblehead Light; the Churn or Spouting Horn.

Salem, (Old Naumkeag) settled 1626 ; incorporated 1629. Noted in early times for the persecution of witches, and Witch Hill, where these innocent people were executed, has a mournful interest. The gallows was erected on a portion of the hill still shown as the spot where nearly a score of men and women were hung. In the new brick Court House may be seen the witch documents containing the testimony against the accused and what evidence that could be given in their behalf by their friends. The witch pins are also in the court house. In the old County Jail, from 1763 to 1813, 4 Federal Street, beams from the old jail where the witches were confined may be seen. Salem also persecuted the Quakers.

The port of Salem formerly had control of all the East India trade, and the wharves and warehouses held the products of the East before the goods were distributed to other ports. This trade was a source of great wealth to the town.

Salem Willows, a narrow strip of land forming the northern boundary of Salem harbor, is a great resort for excursionists during the summer.

The objects of interest : The Charter Street Burying Ground ; Broad Street Burying Ground ; Roger Williams's house corner Essex and North Streets, (sometimes called the Witch House) 1635-36 ; house in which Lafayette and Washington were entertained, 138 Federal Street ; Essex Institute, founded 1848, 132 Essex Street, a large library and collection of paintings and prints appertaining to the history of Essex County. In the rear stands the old building of the Puritan meeting house, used by the first church from 1634 to 1670, and afterwards for a school and a tavern. It has a pointed roof and a small gallery, and a collection of curiosities. Peabody Academy of Science, 161 Essex Street. East Indian Marine Hall (built 1824) has an immense collection in Essex County natural history, East Indian, African, Japanese and other curiosities, with a full collection of relics relating to the maritime history of the ports of Essex County. Endowed by George Peabody in 1867, with $140,000.

Plummer Hall, 134 Essex Street, is the site of W. H. Prescott's birthplace, occupied by the Athenæum Library of 25,000 books. Timothy Pickering, a member of Washington's Cabinet, resided in the fine colonial house on Broad Street, near Cambridge Street, built 1649, and still held in the Pickering family. Nathaniel Bowditch was born in the house in the rear of 14 Brown Street. Gen. F. W. Lander lived at 5 Barton Square. The fine colonial mansion 365 Essex Street was built in 1747 by Cabot. On the First Church is a tablet, showing the site of the First Provincial Congress in 1774. A monument commemorates the affair of 1775, when Lieut. Col. Leslie and three hundred British troops were held up by the Salem Militia, the first actual resistance to the King's troops in America. A bronze tablet, corner of Washington and Lynde Streets, shows the place of the trials for witchcraft in 1792. mony Grove Cemetery; Stone Court House, Deeds and Probate. The armory of the Salem Cadets, organized 1785, 136 Essex Street, is on the site of Gov. Simon Bradstreet's house. The Public Library building, Essex and Monroe Streets, has 30,000 books and some paintings. Custom House, burnt in 1818. At 34 Turner Street, stands "The House of the Seven Gables." The battle between the Chesapeake and Shannon was fought off Salem Shore.

Beverly. Incorporated Oct. 14, 1668; incorporated as a city March 23, 1894. West Beach and Mingo Beach; Essex Bridge; Ferry, established 1636, Salem to Beverly; Roger Conant House, 463 Cabot Street; Parsonage, Rev. John Hale, 1690, his wife last person accused of witchcraft, 33 Hale Street. Rev. John Chipman's house, 634 Cabot Street, first minister of North Beverly, 1715; First Parish Church, 1770, with Revere Bell and Ancient Clock, 217 Cabot Street, church incorporated 1667; Mansion of John Cabot, 1779, now Historical Society Building, 117 Cabot Street; Seth Norwood's house, built by George Cabot, 1783; Washington entertained here. Church and old burying ground, North Beverly; Historical Elm; Dr. O. W. Holmes's residence, Hale Street; Soldiers' Monument, junction of Abbott and Endicott Streets, thirty-six feet high, dedicated Oct. 13, 1882. The first cotton factory in the United States was erected at North Beverly. Beverly was originally a part of Salem. The fishing business was formerly the principal occupation of the people, but it is now an important shoe manufacturing city. Between Beverly and Gloucester are Pride's Crossing and Beverly Farms, and West Manchester, Manchester and Magnolia lie beyond. At Manchester-by-the-sea is the noted Singing Beach.

Gloucester. Settled in 1633, and has always been the principal fishing port in the United States. Eastern Point, Bay View and Lanesville are easily reached by electric cars. Eastern Point forms the easterly boundary of Gloucester Harbor, and on the ocean side the Summer resorts, Bass Rocks and Good Harbor Beach, have a number of hotels and many cottages.

Newburyport. Settled 1635; laid out as the "Port" 1642. Incorporated as Newburyport 1764. Previous to the Revolution the trade with the French West Indies was very profitable.

Oldtown Burying Ground, 1643, site of First Oldtown Church; The Noyes House, 1646, West India or Lovell's Lane; Spencer Pierce House; Garrison House, 1650, Little's Lane; The Coffin House, 1654; Tappan's House, 1670, on Tappan's Lane; The Pillsbury House, 1651; Emery's Tavern in 1812; The Belleville Burying Ground, 1684, site of Queen Anne's Chapel, 1712; St. Paul's Church, 1738-1800; Wolf Tavern, Davenport's Inn, 1722, corner of Fish (State Street) and Thread Needle Alley; Lord Timothy Dexter's House; Old South Church, 1746, with cenotaph to George Whitefield, and Whispering Gallery; The Arnold Tablet; The Old Elm, nearly two hundred years old; Oldtown Church, Carr's Island; First Ferry, 1648; Parker River Bridge.

Newburyport sent seven hundred and seventeen enlisted men to the Revolutionary army. A large number of ships have been built in town for the merchant service and the navy. Church of First Religious Society, 1801; Marine Museum, State Street; Birthplace of William Lloyd Garrison; Atkinson Park; Fountain Park.

The Newburyport Bridge. In 1826 a charter was obtained for this bridge. It crosses the Merrimack River from the foot of Summer Street to the Salisbury Shore, and was finished in 1827 at a cost of $70,000 and opened on the first of September that year. Abutments with stone walls project from either shore. That on the Newburyport side is two hundred and forty and that on the Salisbury side one hundred and eighty-seven yards long. The bridge rests on three abutments and on four piers built of stone, and is further supported by chains passing over the tops of pyramids erected on the piers and under the centres of the arches. The span of the centre arch is eighty-three yards. The bridge is built in two distinct longitudinal parts, so that, in case of accident to one, the passage of the river will not be interrupted. Whole length of bridge three-sevenths of a mile. This bridge was a toll bridge until 1868.

The House occupied by Rev. George Whitefield where he died was on School Street.

Essex Merrimack Bridge, connecting what was Newbury with Salisbury, is now within the limits of Newburyport. Completed July 4, 1793. Was a toll bridge until 1868.

SOUTH SHORE.

Downer Landing, formerly Crow Point, reached by steamboats, which run from Rowe's Wharf to Hull, Nantasket, Downer Landing and Hingham. There are shallow beaches, and Melville Garden, a twenty acre resort, devoted to the use of picnic parties; a large clambake pavilion; boating; fishing; bathing; dancing, and games of all kinds are provided.

Hull, stands at the end of the peninsula, which extends north from the South Shore, forming a natural breakwater and protection to Boston Harbor. The little fort on the Hill was planned by Lafayette and many French troops were buried on the ocean-front base of the hill. Point Allerton presents a magnificent view. There are several large hotels and a large number of summer cottages. On the hill the U. S. Government have planned for the erection of heavy batteries to command the south channel of the harbor.

Nantasket Beach is one of the most beautiful beaches in the world, sweeping the shore in one majestic curve for four miles. In fine weather the beach presents a lively sight with bathers, strolling parties and handsome carriages driving along the smooth, hard sand. The taking of this superb beach was included in the original plan of the Metropolitan Park Commission, and the necessary steps have been taken to cause the beach and the adjoining land for some distance to be included in this years' takings for park reservations.

Jerusalem Road, one of the famous roads in New England, may also be taken as a boulevard, thus providing an ocean reservation for the South Shore, similar to Revere Beach and Boulevard at the North Shore.

Hingham. Established Sept. 2, 1635; one of the oldest maritime towns in the state. On the hill stands the oldest church in use in New England, built in 1681, and has a pyramidal roof and belfry. Maj. Gen. Benjamin Lincoln of the Continental army is buried in the old burying ground. John A. Andrew, the great war governor of the state, is also buried there. Also the home of John D. Long, ex-governor, congressman, and the present able secretary of the United States Navy. Strangers to the town will be greatly interested in the old mansions with their gardens, and the beautiful drives through the vicinity, Jerusalem Road, Glad Tidings Plain, Queen Anne Corner, Liberty Plain, Assinippi, King Oak Hill and Old Spain.

Cohasset was a part of Hingham, established as a town August 23, 1775. It is twenty miles from Boston by railroad, and may be reached from Nantasket by carriage over Jerusalem Road. It has a rocky ocean front, and off the shore is the famous Minot's Ledge lighthouse, a tower of heavy stone with a powerful light, built on the rock; the site of the iron lighthouse which was destroyed with its keepers, by a great gale April 16, 1851.

Scituate. Established Oct. 4, 1636; has a small harbor with bluffs and beaches. Near South Scituate is the estate, the original of the "Old Oaken Bucket." Samuel Wadsworth, the poet, lived here with his stepfather, whose name was Worthy, and in 1817 wrote the famous poem. The estate is now owned by one of the family.

Marshfield, early Rexhame, but changed to Marshfield, March 1, 1642; a quiet shore town and a favorite resort for fishing, yachting and gunning. The summer home and farm of Daniel Webster, and where he died and was buried. The Brant Rock House is directly on the beach.

Duxbury, Established June 7, 1637, as common land; one of the oldest towns of Plymouth Colony. Here was the home of John Alden, Elder William Brewster, Capt. Miles Standish and many other Pilgrims. On Captain's Hill stands a high, round, stone tower, erected as a memorial to Myles Standish, who lived close to the hill.

Plymouth. Settled in 1620 by the Pilgrims who came in the Mayflower. One of the most interesting places to visit in New England. The Plymouth steamboat makes a round trip daily from Boston, passing out Boston Harbor, along the South Shore to Plymouth. Plymouth is also reached by the Old Colony Railroad at the South Union Station.

PLYMOUTH ROCK.

Plymouth Rock and the original landing place are at the base of Cole's Hill, and a granite canopy stands over the rock. The upper part of the canopy contains the bones of many of the Pilgrims who died during the first winter and were buried at the base of this hill. In the war of the Revolution and the war of 1812, fortifications were garrisoned on this hill.

Court House. In this building are kept many valuable documents, the patent document and records of the Colony, the will of Myles Standish, etc.

Pilgrim Hall. Within this building a large museum of Pilgrim memorials and curiosities are kept.

Burial Hill. Here is the site of the ancient fort which served as a meeting house, and the Pilgrims attended fully armed and equipped for any sudden onslaught from the savages. The ancient burial ground is kept in excellent condition, and all around may be seen on the old slate tablets, familiar names of the Pilgrims.

The National Monument to the Pilgrims was erected in 1888. The total height of the monument is eighty-one feet, designed by Hammatt Billings, and is one of the finest monuments in the world.

Plymouth Beach forms the outer protection of the harbor, is more than three and a half miles long and Gurnet Light is about five miles from the rock.

Plymouth Woods, a large tract of wild wood west of the town has deer and other animals that are seldom disturbed by the hunter.

CITIES AND TOWNS IN THE VICINITY OF BOSTON.

Chelsea. Ancient Indian name, Winnisimmet; formerly a part of Boston called Romney Marsh. Incorporated as a town 1738; as a city, March 13, 1857. Lexington, March 20, 1713; the north precinct of Cambridge. On the Common stands a monument marking the site of the three meeting houses in Lexington. A few rods north of the monument is a large boulder, placed to mark the line of the minutemen. Facing the Common is the Jonathan Harrington house; he was in Captain Parker's company and fell mortally wounded at the first fire of the British soldiers. He got to the door of his home, but fell dead at his wife's feet.

The Soldiers' Monument on the Common, probably the oldest monument erected to commemorate the battles of the Revolution, was erected by the State of Massachusetts in 1799. In front of this monument Lafayette was welcomed to Lexington. On the opposite side of the Common is the site of the Munroe house, built 1729, occupied at the time of the battle by Marrett Munroe. A stone cannon marks the spot occupied by a British field piece April 19, 1775.

Munroe Tavern occupied by Earl Percy as headquarters, April 19, 1775; Washington dined here on his visit to Lexington, November, 1789; Benjamin Wellington Tablet; Old Clark house, where Adams and Hancock were awakened by Paul Revere on morning of April 19, 1775; Fiske house, (Dr. Joseph Fiske occupied at time of battle, 1732) on Hancock Street; Sanderson house; Buckman Tavern, the rallying place of the minutemen on the night of April 18; contains many bullet holes made by the British soldiers; Town Hall; Cary Library; High School building.

slain British and the old monument, on the other side a large statute of the minuteman. Sleepy Hollow Cemetery has the graves of Hawthorne, Emerson, A. Bronson Alcott, Louisa May Alcott, Thoreau, Elisha Mulford, and other well known people of the town. The Hill Burying Ground; Concord Antiquarian Society, has a large amount of curiosities and valuable relics of the past history of Concord; the Public Library has 26,000 books; Wright's Tavern; the Old Manse, near North Bridge, dates from 1765, and was Hawthorne's home for four years; Ralph Waldo Emerson's house, in which he dwelt from 1835 to his death in 1883, is at the junction of the Old Boston and Lexington roads; the Wayside House, on the Lexington road was, in 1852-53 and 1860-64, the home of Hawthorne; the Alcotts lived in the house adjacent; a cairn as large as a haycock, on the shore of Walden Pond, marks the site of the famous hut of Thoreau. The Massachusetts State Reformatory was built in 1877.

Somerville was a part of Charlestown. Town incorporated March 3, 1842; incorporated as a city 1871. Old Powder House in West Somerville was an old mill built by John Mallett on a site purchased in 1703-04 and was deeded in 1747 to the Province of the Massachusetts Bay in New England, and old mill used for a powder house for many years. The land surrounding the house is laid out as a public park. On Sept. 1, 1774, General Gage seized two hundred and fifty half barrels of gun powder stored within. In 1775 it became the magazine of the American army beseiging Boston. Central Hill, a redoubt erected here, and armed with four 8-inch seige guns, erected in 1885 by the city, and is within the lines of the French redoubt which was thrown up by the American troops under Gen. Israel Putnam immediately after the Battle of Bunker Hill, and became part of the beseiging lines of Boston, 1775-76. The guns were donated by Congress. Part of the Revolutionary parapet is included in this redoubt.

Winter Hill, one hundred and twenty-four feet high; here the captured army of Gen. Burgoyne were encamped for some months before exchanged. Gen. Greene's headquarters; site of old Winter Hill Fort; Old Royal House Public Library; High School.

Brookline, anciently known as "Muddy River," belonged to Boston, but was set off and incorporated as a town Nov. 13, 1705. Western Avenue was opened from Boston to Brookline July 21, 1821, with great ceremony.

Brookline is the residential section of many of Boston's most prosperous business men. It has long had the reputation of being the wealthiest town for its population in the United States, if not in the world.

A drive through this beautiful suburb to view its many palatial residences is one of the most pleasing features of a stranger's visit to Boston.

To give some idea of the town's wealth, the following statistics may be of interest: Receipts for year ending Feb. 15, 1899, $1,631,245.28; payments,

OLD ELM, CAMBRIDGE.

$1,419,685.09; leaving a cash balance of $211,560.29. The total valuation is, real estate, $49,947,300; personal estate, $16,608,200; bank and corporation stock (estimated) $10,000,000, and the tax levy is $787,188.70. The population was estimated at 19,000; polls assessed, 5,091; tax rate $11.80 per $1,000; total value of school property, $1,011,360. The Public Library has 35,000 volumes and many pamphlets and manuscripts.

The principal historical places are the home of Isaac Gardner, killed at Lexington, site of Aspinwall house, site of Punch Bowl Tavern, Old Goddard house, house of Robert Sharp and Old Burying Ground.

At Clyde Park are the clubhouse and grounds of the Country Club, organized from among the members of leading clubs of Boston.

The town's rapid development is due to the filling up of Back Bay, the construction of Beacon street, and Commonwealth Avenue Boulevard leading directly to Brookline, and the fine streets laid out in the Back Bay District, with the erection of a superior class of dwellings from the Public Garden to Brookline, thereby connecting the two finest residential sections in the state.

Electric cars run direct from the Subway through the beautiful Back Bay District of Boston over the well-built boulevards of Brookline; carriage drives through the Back Bay Fens connect with the streets along the eastern boundary of the town.

Those desiring more detailed information about the town, or more particularly concerning its real estate interests, should consult Mr. Frank A. Russell, who has devoted himself exclusively to the handling of Brookline real estate, mortgages, etc. Mr. Russell's offices are located at 113 Devonshire Street, Boston, and at 1345 Beacon Street (Coolidge Corner) Brookline.

The first printing press set up in Cambridge, 1639 ; Shepperd Memorial Church ; Episcopal Theological School ; St. John's Church ; Longfellow Memorial Park to keep open the view to the Charles River.

First Burying Ground, on Massachusetts Avenue, corner of Garden Street, Cambridge. The First Church forms the eastern boundary of the ground, and directly opposite are grounds and buildings of Harvard College. On the south boundary of the burying ground is Old Christ Church on Garden Street. A monument to the six minutemen killed April 19, 1775, stands on this ground, and the old tombs and graves contain the remains of many who were prominent in the church, the government and the army.

Mount Auburn Cemetery, Watertown, was established in 1831. The large gateway is of Egyptian architecture, and near the entrance is the handsome new chapel and the Sphinx is but a short distance. This was the earliest garden cemetery in America, and is laid out on the landscape plan. A few of the distinguished persons buried here are Edward Everett, Charles Sumner, Prof. Agassiz, Rufus Choate, William Ellery Channing, James Russell Lowell, Nathaniel Bowditch, Anson Burlingame, Henry W. Longfellow, Phillips Brooks, William Warren, Edwin Booth, Francis Parkman, Hosea Ballou, N. P. Willis, Fanny Fern, Margaret Fuller, Dorothy Dix, Charlotte Cushman, Spurzheim, Felton, Fields, Prescott, Palfrey, Ticknor, Sparks and hosts of others.

New City Hall, gift of F. N. Rindge, who also gave the handsome Public Library building, which contains 60,000 books, and the land for the High School opposite, besides erecting and maintaining the finely equipped Manual Training ing School. His gifts exceed $1,000,000. Cambridge Field, Rindge Field and the Riverside Parkway cost $800,000. Near Mt. Auburn is the beautiful park and pond of three hundred and thirty acres, surrounding Fresh Pond with a three mile driveway. Not far from Harvard College are the spacious athletic grounds of Soldiers' Field and Botanic Garden of Harvard University, Linnean street. Tablets are placed to designate the route of the British troops as they marched to arrest Hancock and Adams and to destroy the military stores at Concord, on the morning of the 19th of April, 1775.

Newton. Town of Cambridge, Dec. 15, 1691; June 2, 1873, incorporated as a city. Has fifteen villages and is bordered by the Charles River for sixteen miles. The stone terrace monument is on the site of Waban's wigwam, near Nonantum Hill, where Eliot, the apostle to the Indians, founded the first Indian church. Eliot Church, Channing Church and Grace Church; Newton Theological Institute crowns Institution Hill, Newton Centre, founded 1826, by the Baptists. Near Newtonville is Brooklawn, for many years the home of Gen. Wm. Hull, who surrendered Detroit, since 1854 the residence of Gov. Wm. Claflin. Lassell Seminary, Auburndale, for women, occupies eight acres of fine land; founded in 1851.

Norumbega Park, on the banks of the Charles River, has been laid out as a pleasure ground and is fitted up with a large, open air theatre, boat house, electric fountain, deer park, restaurant, etc., by the Commonwealth Avenue Street Railway Company of Newton.

Newton Lower Falls. St. Mary's Episcopal Church, with the burying ground adjoining. The Falls of the Charles River here have been utilized by paper mills since 1790. Echo Bridge, near the falls, is a granite aqueduct five hundred feet long, whose central arch crossing the Charles River has a span of one hundred and thirty feet. It is included in the Hemlock Gorge Reservation, where the river flows in rapids through a romantic and wild country.

Newtonville. Central Congregational Church, Walnut Street; Methodist Episcopal Church and Newton High School.

Newton Highlands. Congregational Church.

The Farlow Estate, the homestead of John S. Farlow, the donor of Farlow Park to the city of Newton, is a beautiful tract of land of forty acres in one of the choicest sections of Newton. Its elevation is two hundred and fifty feet and it commands the extended view from the dome of the State House to Mt. Monadnock, and yet it is but a few minutes' walk to electric and steam roads. The old name was Nonantum Hill, from the Indian chief. It was in the beautiful valley to the south that Eliot taught the Indians, and the spot is appropriately marked by the Eliot Memorial. But even such homesteads have to give way to the requirements of modern improvements, and the hill has recently been sold to a syndicate of Newton gentlemen, represented by the local real estate firm of Wiley S. and Frank Edmunds, who have charge of its sale and development, as well as of several other tracts in the various parts of Newton. Their lists comprise the choicest of improved real estate on the market, including the fine old estates and the newer residential properties on the line of Commonwealth Avenue Boulevard and elsewhere. With their local offices at Newton and Newton Centre, in connection with the Boston office, they have superior facilities for the development and sale of choice property.

Centre Street Burying Ground is the oldest ground in Newton. The first settlers' remains were buried here and a large granite monument stands in the oldest portion of the ground, with the names of the first settlers cut in the stone. Directly in front of the burying ground once stood the First Parish Church. The ancient tombs and gravestones have an interesting record in the quaint epitaphs of those who were prominent in the town in days gone by, and the ranks of captain, lieutenant and ensign appear frequently on the oldest stones, denoting their services in the early Indian wars, and the epitaphs of a later period give the rank of those who served in the French and Indian war and the Revolution. Here were buried Maj. Gen. Wm. Hull, Brig. Gen. Michael Jackson, with his sons, officers of the Revolutionary army, Rev. John Eliot, A. M., son of the Apostle John Eliot; the pastor of the first church in Newton was buried here in 1668.

Walnut Street Cemetery, on Walnut Street, is a fine, modern ground, laid out on the landscape plan, and contains a large number of beautiful monuments.

Newton Lower Falls Ancient Burying Ground is the fourth oldest yard in Newton, and several soldiers of the Revolutionary war are buried here.

West Newton Burying Ground, on River Street, is the second oldest ground in Newton. Lieut. Col. Nathaniel Fuller and other soldiers of the Revolution are buried here.

Newton Highlands Burying Ground has a large number of Revolutionary soldiers buried in the tombs and ground.

lebank of Rowley, and twenty-six other soldiers slain by the Indians, April 18, 1676, near the site of the monument; First Church; First Burying Ground, adjoining the church, where a large number of Revolutionary soldiers are buried.

Wayside Inn, South Sudbury. The Red Horse or Howe Tavern, made famous by Longfellow's "Tales of a Wayside Inn," was built in 1683, by David Howe, and kept as a tavern by four generations of his family until 1860, when it was closed on account of the death of Squire Lyman Howe, who died 1859, and until recently occupied as a private house. Among the many famous persons who have been entertained here, are General Washington, the Marquis de Lafayette, Judge Sewall, Mme. Knight, H. W. Longfellow, Luigi Monti, General Burgoyne, Ole Bull and James T. Fields.

The house is twenty-two miles from Boston, on the Central Massachusetts division of the Boston & Maine Railroad, one and one-half miles from Wayside Inn station, two and one-half miles from South Sudbury.

Edward R. Lemon has opened the house as an inn, and it is now furnished throughout with rare, antique furniture, and is open for guests.

Milton. Part of Dorchester called Uncataquissett. May 7, 1662, established as Milton. Milton Cemetery, one of the best cemeteries in the state. The oldest burying place in the town is a part of this cemetery; Gov. Hutchinson's House, 1775; House where Suffolk Resolves were adopted Sept. 9, 1774; the Public Library; Town Hall; First Church; Walter Baker's Chocolate Mills at Lower Mills, on the Neponset River; Milton Academy.

Milton Park, a new residential district bounded by Blue Hills Parkway, Houston Avenue, Dyer Road, and Thacher Street, contains one hundred and eighty house lots with an area of 5,000 square feet. The park is a part of the old Peter Thacher farm, and occupied by him when first pastor of Milton.

Thomas Vose sold, June 20, 1684, to Peter Thacher, twenty-three acres of land, and April 19, 1717, Henry Vose sold to Susanna Thacher (wife of Peter), eighty-seven acres of land, also a swamp, all being on "Providence Plain," now known as "Thacher Plain." Rev. Peter Thacher's remains were buried in the Milton Cemetery.

A reservation of land, twenty by thirty feet in area, on Dyer Road, near the junction of Warren Avenue, is the site of the cellar of the old Thacher homestead. From the bottom of this cellar grew a large elm tree, now over two feet in diameter. The tree will be preserved, and the door stone of the old house will be used as a base for a bronze tablet in memory of Mr. Thacher. The plot will be inclosed with a granite curbing. A suitable lot has been reserved in the park for a memorial church to Rev. Peter Thacher. This valuable property has been developed by J. B. L. Bartlett, of 85 Water Street, Boston.

Quincy. Part of Braintree established as Quincy, with part of that portion of Dorchester called "Squantum and the Farms." Incorporated as a town eb. 12, 1792. At Independence Avenue and Franklin Streets, South Quincy, is the birthplace of John Quincy Adams, built 1700, and John Adams lived there; nearby is the larger house where John Adams was born; John Hancock's birthplace is near the site, being where the library stands; Peter Butler house, noted as the residence of the Black, Greenleaf and Butler families of Quincy; Adams Academy, founded 1823, by gift of President John Adams; First Church, burial place of John and John Q. Adams; First Burying Ground; Abigail Adams monument; a cairn on Payne's Hill marks the spot where Abigail Adams watched the battle of Bunker Hill; St. Paul's Church Quarry, first quarry in the United States; First Railroad in the United States at the quarries; Thomas Crane Public Library, a granite building, cost $50,000, has 20,000 books; Merry Mount Park has sixty-five acres of oaks and hemlocks; a granite tablet on the harbor cliff of Squantum, shows where Myles Standish landed.

Braintree. Land belonged to Boston, called Mount Wollaston. Established May 13, 1640. Site of First Iron Works in United States; First Church, 1606; Old Bates house; Dr. Storr's house; site of Old Hayward house; First Burying Ground; Thayer Academy, established from fund of $200,000 donated by General Sylvanus Thayer of the United States army, at South Braintree.

Hyde Park. Parts of Dedham, Dorchester and Milton. Incorporated as Hyde Park April 22, 1868; Fairview Cemetery.

Dedham. Common land. Established Sept. 8, 1636. Old Fairbanks house, 1636, now in charge of the Daughters of the Revolution; site of Abraham Shaw's mill, 1639; Old Indian Ford; County Court House; Dedham Historical Society Building and Library, has a large collection of relics relating to Dedham history; Public Library; Old Powder House and Powder House Rock, building erected 17th century; Memorial Hall, erected 1867, in memory of the soldiers who died 161-65, from Dedham.

Canton. Part of Stoughton. Incorporated Feb. 23, 1797. First Church; First Burying Ground, adjoining the church, Indian chiefs buried here; new addition to old ground laid out on landscape plan, and a monument erected to Gen. Gridley, Revolutionary army, under which his remains are buried; opposite site of Nathaniel May Tavern, where the patriots under Gridley assembled; Old Fenno house, built 1704; Revere Copper Works; Silk Factory; site of old Trinity Church, and old Burying Ground in the rear.

Bridgewater. Part of Duxbury called New Plantation. Established as Bridgewater, June 3, 1656. Hugh Orr erected a trip hammer on Hatfield River, and in 1748 made five hundred muskets, the first turned out in America for the Province of Massachusetts. In the Revolution he made many brass and iron cannon and cannon balls for the Continental army; Old Cemetery; Public Library; Memorial Hall, near Central Square.

The League of American Wheelmen is an organization to promote the general interests of cycling and to protect and assure the rights of wheelmen. It endeavors to facilitate touring and to advance the happiness of wheelmen on pleasure bent. By its advocacy of good roads, and through its efforts, millions of dollars have been spent throughout the United States towards securing improvement in the condition of the highways. It has caused the erection of thousands of guide-boards, danger signs and free pumps for the safety and utility of travellers. It has prosecuted cycle thieves and other violators of the law, and has obtained legislation in many states, by which the rights of cyclists have been ascertained and defended. In short, the League of American Wheelmen stands for all that is best and broadest in our national affairs, and insures to the wheelmen their just rights and equality under the law.

It costs $2 to join the L. A. W., and $1 for renewal, and for this amount numerous advantages are given. For information write Abbot Bassett, secretary, Russia Bldg., 530 Atlantic Ave., Boston.

The Massachusetts Division, League of American Wheelmen has been especially active and has been responsible for the passage of a law constituting a highway commission for the construction and maintenance of good roads as well as a law requiring the erection of guide-boards on all highways in the state. Members of the Massachusetts Division are afforded these particular advantages: a new road-book, with accompanying maps, complete and perfect in every detail, and conceded to be one of the best ever issued, is given free to all members, reduced rates at official hotels and repair shops, and periodical meets where members are afforded much enjoyment at little or no expense. The National Meet of the L. A. W. held in Boston, Aug. 14-19, 1899. Every wheelman and wheelwoman should join at once. You can correspond and answer will be immediately returned by Aaron Wolfson, secretary-treasurer, Russia Bldg., 530 Atlantic Ave., Boston.

Armstrong's Railway Dining and News Rooms, established at passenger stations on the Boston & Albany Railroad and its branches, the Central Passenger Station at Taunton on the N. Y., N. H. & H. R.R., Boston & Maine on Northern, Southern, Eastern, Western and all other divisions, Fitchburg Railroad and its branches, Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad. The large dining room of the Union Station, Boston, seats one hundred and thirty people, and like all the dining rooms that belong to the Armstrong system, is furnished in the best manner, and fully equipped for serving the public with best quality of food at short notice.

The Archway Book Store has for more than thirty years been one of the landmarks of Boston. Here may be found a large assortment of all the new and popular books of the day, by standard authors in sets and single volumes and in all styles of bindings. One of the specialties of this store is "remainders of editions." Second-hand books are also a feature, and some rare bargains in this line are always to be found on the counters.

A visit to this store will well repay every one interested in books.

The Old Corner Bookstore, 283 Washington Street, corner School Street. Carter (Richard B.) & Hendee (Charles J.) occupied this store from 1828 to 1833. They were succeeded by Allen (John) & Ticknor (William D.) in 1833. From 1837 to 1844, William D. Ticknor alone occupied the store, and subsequently with his partners, John Reed, Jr. and James T. Fields, until the fall of 1865, when, the senior partner having died, the new firm of Ticknor (Howard M.) & Fields (James T.) removed to Tremont Street.

E. P. Dutton & Co. removed from the opposite side of the street to the old store, and on the first of September, 1869, were succeeded by Alexander Williams under the firm name of A. Williams & Co., who soon associated with himself as partners, Charles L. Damrell, H. M. Upham and J. G. Cupples. Mr. Williams, in April, 1883, disposed of his interest to his associates who continued the business under the firm name of Cupples, Upham & Co. In April, 1887, Mr. Cupples disposed of his interest to Charles L. Damrell and Henry M. Upham, under the firm name of Damrell & Upham. Mr. Damrell died March 18, 1896, and Mr. Upham purchased his interest and became the sole proprietor under the firm name of Damrell & Upham. Here may be found a carefully selected stock of the latest editions of standard books, in fine bindings, illustrated works, medical, scientific and agricultural books, English and American juveniles, bibles, prayer books, hymnals and all church publications, atlases, maps and globes. Receive subscriptions for American and foreign magazines and newspapers.

The W. B. Clarke Co., booksellers, stationers and engravers, Park Street, corner of Tremont Street. The business conducted by the W. B. Clarke Co. was established a quarter of a century ago and has long been one of the most prominent enterprises of the kind in the city. The firm are booksellers, stationers and engravers, and their store, under Park Street Church, is the recognized headquarters for American and foreign publications, as the stock of books is not only very large but is sure to include all the latest issues of leading publishing houses, as well as an exceptionally complete assortment of standard works in all varieties of binding. Particular attention is given to the buying and selling of libraries, and there is no house in the country that offers more genuine bargains. Single subscriptions to leading periodicals are received at club rates and special combination prices are made for magazines at retail. All standard books can be obtained here at the very lowest prices. The assortment of stationery is very complete, but a specialty is made of the highest grade stationery for social correspondence, and goods bought from the W. B. Clarke Co. are not only correct in style but absolutely first-class in every detail of quality. A specialty is made of fine engraving, and no better work in the way of cards, invitations, etc., is done in all New England, while the facilities are such as to enable the firm to fill orders at very short notice, and to quote as low prices as can be named on work of equal merit.

One of the most popular stores in Boston is the stationary store of M. R. Warren Company, at 336 Washington Street; they are the leading law stationers in Massachusetts beside doing a large bank, railroad and commercial business, and are also up to date on fancy stationary, wedding invitations, address cards, etc.; they carry a large stock of miscellaneous stationary and blank books and manufacture to order. It will repay you to call.

Macullar Parker Company,

398 and 400 Washington Street,

Call the attention of gentlemen who desire the best clothes — whether ready to put on or to be made to measure — to the fact that they manufacture their clothing in clean, well-lighted workrooms on the premises.

Only the most reliable fabrics are used, the garments are thoroughly made and in prevailing fashions, and prices are on a fair basis for first-class productions. Young Men's and Boys' Garments are made with the same degree of care as the Men's work, and for the "little folks" our stock of juvenile garments is always attractive.

Strangers visiting Boston, as well as our own citizens, are cordially invited to inspect our workshops at any time during business hours.

E. E. MARDEN, Proprietor.

This hotel is situated on high ground overlooking the famous Charles River. Ten acres of grounds surround the house, affording ample shade, tennis, croquet, etc., opposite Newton Boat and Boston Athletic Clubs, Riverside Recreation Grounds, and within three minutes' walk of Norumbega Park.

Among the attractions offered as a summer resort the following may be mentioned: Beautiful drives, fine roads for wheeling, canoeing, etc. The concert and illumination of the river and canoes given by the Newton Boat Club Saturday evenings is a very attractive feature. The hotel is but two minutes' walk from Riverside Station, and with a service of fifty trains daily, only twenty-five minutes' ride from Boston, it makes it especially desirable for business men, clerks and others.

Private dining rooms overlooking the river, and special rooms for club parties. As a resort for select wheeling parties the Pigeon Hill House has no superior. Canoes furnished at hotel.

Mr. Marden was for years connected with Mr. Joseph Lee at the Woodland Park Hotel, Auburndale, and the table and service will be strictly first-class. American and European plans. Stable accommodations.
